Nebraska coach Tom Osborne: "Colorado has the best balanced team we've faced this year. Alabama had a fine offense but their defense was a little suspect. Iowa State moved the ball pretty well, but their main strength was on defense. Colorado is very good at both."

Colorado coach Bill Mallory: "We have never played four full quarters of good football against Nebraska. We played three last year. Hopefully, this will be the year for four. Nebraska has really improved its running game. They have the best 1-2 punch at tailback in the league in Hipp and Berns."

State picketing code draws AFL-CIO fire

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

The state AFL-CIO Friday urged the Legislature's Judiciary Committee to eliminate Nebraska's restrictive picketing control law from the new criminal code.

All major portions of the law dealing with violent illegal acts or trespass are covered by other provisions of the code, Sen. William Brennan of Omaha said.

The only sections of the picketing statute not covered elsewhere in the code are those which require that pickets remain at least 50 feet from each entrance to a plant under strike and that no more than two pickets be within 50 feet of one another, Brennan said.

Those provisions of the law open the way to "harassment" of union picketers, he said.

Brennan appeared before the committee in his position as president of the state AFL-CIO.

Omaha attorney Robert O'Connor, AFL-CIO counsel, said the law is "abused and misused" to intimidate picketers.

In Dakota City last March, it was used to justify the arrest of peaceful picketers at the Iowa Beef Processors plant, Brennan said.

Those 40 to 60 picketers, most of them women, were subjected to mace and tear gas released by the Dakota County sheriff's office and the State Patrol, local union President Richard Kelly told the senators.

The picketers were peacefully seated on the ground but, although they were more than 50 feet from any entrances, they were not 50 feet apart, Kelly said.

Some of the picketers were subjected to physical abuse, the committee was told, even though they did not act violently.

Robert O'Connor Jr., who also represented the AFL-CIO, said the limitation on space and numbers in Nebraska's picketing law unconstitutionally restricts free speech.

An attorney general's opinion, dated this year, also raises a question of constitutionality, he said.

The limitations make it impossible for union picketers to "adequately demonstrate to the public what the dispute is about," he said.

Armed members of Hell's Angels, who camped in Nebraska this year without disturbance by law enforcement officials, seem to "have more rights" than picketing labor union members, Brennan said.

The committee heard a number of other suggestions for revision of the new criminal code before it is scheduled to take effect next summer.

Omaha City Prosecutor Gary Bucchino asked for increased penalties for prostitutes.

Greater penalties would drive "a large percentage of the professionals" out of Omaha, and reduce the opportunities for assault in the city, he said.

Barbara Gaither, executive director of the Nebraska Civil Liberties Union, said her organization is opposed to criminal penalties for any so-called victimless crimes (including prostitution) and favors determinate sentencing for felons.

Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh said amendments are needed in both the sexual assault and gambling sections of the code.

Gambling should remain illegal (with current constitutional exceptions), he said, but it should not be treated as a serious offense if betting is casual, rather than professional.

Committee's fuel path opposite of Carter's

Washington (UPI) — Adopting a course exactly the opposite of President Carter's energy plan, the Senate Finance Committee gave its final approval Friday to legislation providing $40 billion over eight years in tax credits and incentives for energy conservation and production.

The committee cleared the way for action Tuesday on the Senate floor, where the proposal will run into opposition from liberals including Sens. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and James Abourezk, D-S.D.

The final vote to report the bill, which was tentatively approved last week, was 13-5. Voting against the bill were two Democrats — Sens. Harry Byrd, Va., and Floyd Haskell, Colo. — and three Republicans — Bob Dole, Kan., William Roth, Del., and Paul Laxalt, Nev.

If the Senate goes along with the plan advanced by Chairman Russell Long, D-La., the final bill will not look like either the Finance Committee bill or the one passed earlier by the House which was close to Carter's request.

Instead, the final bill would be written in a House-Senate conference committee, combining the Senate's ideas on how to spend federal tax money with the House-passed tax increases such as the tax on gas guzzling automobiles, a tax on industrial use of gas and oil and a tax on crude oil to raise its cost to the world price.

Long, in his weekly interview for Louisiana television stations, predicted Friday that the final bill would be a mix.

"My guess is that we will try to work something out that would not be too burdensome on the public," Long protesters — located about 50 feet away from the Veterans Auditorium podium — began to chant. He continued to speak without acknowledging the repeated chants to "stop the neutron bomb!"

Carter had previously said there was substantial agreement between the two superpowers but had cautioned that a final pact was not near at hand.

On his pet subject, energy, Carter said he was "determined that the consumers will not be hurt and that the oil companies will not profit in unwarranted fashion."

"They are getting the highest prices on Earth and still they want more, and unless we act they will get it and it will come out of the pockets of those who can least afford it," Carter said.

He said the conservation aspects of his program were "bitter medicine, but not nearly such bitter medicine as the catastrophe that will befall us if we don't act now."

Carter called on Americans "to recognize a harsh reality, the reality that the age of cheap and unlimited gas is over. In this sense, the plan is bitter medicine."

Sounding an ominous tone, Carter warned that unless an energy plan was adopted the problem would not be "limited to just the long lines at gas stations."

"All prices will start shooting up with money hemorrhaging out of the economy in the hundreds of billions of dollars and more and more people will be thrown out of work," Carter said.

He said the entire world would be in "a real danger," because the "entire international monetary and economic system would collapse."

Carter made two stops — in Detroit and Des Moines — on the first day of a three-day tour of the Midwest and West devoted to taking his problems to the people and listening to theirs. He planned to spend the night as a guest in an Iowa farm home outside Des Moines.

In Detroit, the President fielded questions on urban problems. He was challenged to act as "the hope of the poor people" and responded "the nation will feel the benefits of what we've done in the next few months."

said. "If there is some tax as a result of having to compromise with the House, it would be balanced by the tax cuts so it wouldn't seriously impact on anyone."

The major item in the Senate bill is a 50% investment tax credit for new equipment used in industry, hospitals, local government and other similar institutions to burn a fuel other than oil or gas.

Various other tax credits are scattered throughout the bill, including some for individuals such as a tax credit for home insulation.

Working world isn't new to student job counselor

Interviews aren't new for Kookie Henderson; it's just that she's used to being on the other end of things.

One of three staff members of Youth Employment Service (YES), Kookie interviews young people applying for jobs. She then matches the applicants with requests from employers who want jobs filled.

The youngest staff member — she shares the tiny office space in Room 208 of the downtown YMCA Building with Pius X High School junior Laura Matulis and Lincoln High School senior Alaina Putnam — Kookie has seniority over her office mates. The 15-year-old Lincoln High sophomore has been with YES more than a year now.

Sponsored by Lincoln's five Sertoma clubs, YES finds jobs for youngsters age 14 to 18.

That she often interviews older kids doesn't bother Kookie at all. "I just don't tell them how old I am. Anyway, everyone thinks I look much older than 15."

Most of the applicants take her seriously. "Everyone knows you have to show some respect when you go on an interview — especially if you want a job."

Interviewing her peers was much harder at the start, she confides. "I used to have a basic list of questions I asked everyone. Now I'm more familiarized and I ask different questions."

She's discovered that each of the job-seekers makes for a different interview. "They either talk or they don't," sighed Kookie. "They either sit there and shake their heads or they're all mouth."

Youth In Action

Kookie spends 14 hours on the job weekly, including a half-day on Saturdays. Besides gaining office skills, she likes the responsibility that comes with her position.

There are times, however, when she wonders if she's found the right student for the right job. One babysitter spent an afternoon in a lady's home baking pies, cookies, cakes and bread to take home. Kookie said the girl's work record will indicate her irresponsibility to potential employers.

She quickly adds that the bad experiences have been very few. There are also times, she notes, when an employer has tried to "rip a kid off" by paying only a dollar an hour for housework.

Kookie hopes to go into office work when she graduates high school. She believes she's "getting an advantage starting so young."

Her experience has taught her what to say to people, how to answer phones and how to budget her work time to get things done. "I've also learned from a lot of mistakes I've made," she adds.

The hard part of the job is not being able to find work for applicants who really are in need. "I see kids who come up here and we don't have jobs for them and they're really sad. I feel so fortunate that I was able to get this job."

Angelo spins his last web

London (UPI) — Angelo the deadly Mexican red knee spider, on the run in Essex County for more than a month, has finally gone to his web in the sky.

The poisonous red knee was first spotted in the Basildon area of Essex Sept. 11 and police spent days in a spider hunt after warnings went out on how the hairy creature, nicknamed Angelo, could attack humans by leaping at them from a hiding place.

A school teacher who knows his spiders told police he believed that Angelo came in on a truck which had picked up produce from South America at a London dock.

Earlier, the hunt was called off when one householder told police he was convinced his cat had eaten Angelo.

But Thursday the wily spider reappeared in a cardboard box filled with papers in the automobile Len Beisser had driven from his home in Basildon to Barking.

His receptionist was bringing in the box when "she let out a horrible shriek and threw the box to the ground," Beisser said.

"I thought she had gone mad until I saw this spider as big as a man's hand with orange markings on its legs," he said.

Beisser threw a bowl over the creature and the staff gathered up every available can of aerosol spray — hair lacquer and deodorant as no insect killer was in the office — and squirted Angelo until he suffocated.

Barking police took the hairy corpse off to London Zoo for examination.

"There are no signs of life and he has been pronounced dead," a police spokesman solemnly declared. "He's at rest in his little web in the sky."

South African protests mount

Johannesburg, South Africa (AP) — Police arrested 150 blacks and Indians in South Africa Friday as protests mounted inside and outside the country against the government crackdown on black movements and closing of black newspapers.

The United States and The Netherlands said they were recalling their ambassadors for consultations on the events in South Africa.

In Paris, the French Foreign Ministry said the crackdown on South African blacks "can only engender violence and complicate the search for a peaceful solution to the problems of southern Africa."

Decline in farm prices holds down index

(c) New York Times

Washington — As a result of declining farm prices, the nation's inflation rate held at moderate levels last month with consumer prices rising 0.3%, the same as in August, the government reported Friday.

The Labor Department's Consumer price index last month was 6.6% above the level in September 1976, which — while high by historical standards — still gives the United States one of the best price records among the industrial countries. Only in Switzerland, West Germany and Japan has inflation been at more modest rates.

Administration economic officials had been predicting a tapering off of inflation since last winter when the cost of living was increasing by double digit annual rates, reflecting the impact of frigid weather conditions on food supplies.

White House press secretary Jody

Powell said President Carter was "particularly pleased" by this month's report. "Though the new figures do not mean our problems with inflation are over, they do clearly indicate a welcome respite for consumers," Powell commented.

Improved inflation conditions and continued operation of the economy well below its potential are among the reasons why the Carter administration has taken such a strong stand against higher interest rates. It posted an unusual warning to the Federal Reserve Board Friday, noting that higher interest rates have unsettled the stock market and threaten to reduce the flow of funds to housing.

The Consumer Price Index is based on a monthly survey of 400 items selected to represent price movement of all goods and services purchased by urban wage earners.

Food prices from this survey actually fell by 0.4% last month, according to the raw figures, but after seasonal adjustment this was turned into an 0.1% increase. Prices for commodities other than food were up 0.2% and services rose by 0.5%.

Though large farm surpluses may continue depressing consumer food prices over the next month or two, neither private nor government economists expect the situation to last indefinitely.

"Depressed farm income must reduce the investment in next year's crops and government policies (recently announced acreage set-asides for wheat) will put a prop under prices," said Otto Eckstein, former chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers.

A harbinger of what may be in store came in the wholesale price index for September, which rose 0.5%, its largest gain since April. The increase was somewhat greater than anticipated, owing to a smaller than estimated decline in prices of farm products and processed foods and feeds. Wholesale prices are generally considered pointers to what the consumer will pay in months ahead.

The 6.6% year-to-year rise in consumer prices is close to what most economists both in and out of government believe is the basic underlying rate of inflation, and there are slim prospects that this can be wittled down much over the next 12 months. One reason is that annual wage rate increases are running at roughly the same rate.

Another reason is that some critical economic costs are bound to rise with the higher minimum wage, increases in the Social Security and unemployment insurance taxes, and the more expensive oil that will probably result from President Carter's energy program.

Lynyrd Skynyrd trio victims of plane crash

By James Simon

Associated Press

The rock music world may have lost one of its hardest-driving, hardest-working and hardest-living groups with the deaths of three members of the band Lynyrd Skynyrd.

Singer Ronnie Van Zant, guitarist Steve Gaines and his sister, backup singer Cassie, all 28, died in a Thursday night airplane crash in McComb, Miss., while traveling between concert dates to promote the band's new album, "Street Survivors."

The other six members of the band were injured in the crash.

Van Zant, the group's outspoken leader, epitomized the band's image of rebellious, hard-drinking, hell-raising Southerners. He seemed equally at ease picking a fight and picking up a microphone to belt out bluesy rock numbers like "T For Texas" and "Gimme Three Steps" in his raspy voice.

"Ronnie is the ultimate say-so," Gaines said in an interview this summer. "If there's a disagreement Ronnie settles it, bangs a few heads together and says this is what we're going to do."

But band members admitted their rebellious image may have been overblown.

"Nobody wants to read about 'Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm,'" bassist Leon Wilkerson said this summer. And Gaines readily admitted he hadn't seen any "real violence" in this year with the band.

Skynyrd's three stellar guitarists were "my boys" to Van Zant, who would put his arms around Gaines, Gary Rossington and Allen

Collins in concert and beam as they took turns soloing and trading off guitar licks.

Van Zant was equally proud of the South, using a huge Confederate flag as a stage backdrop. He wrote the band's one AM radio hit, "Sweet Home Alabama," as a rebuke to Neil Young, whom Van Zant felt unfairly put down his people in such songs as "Southern Man" and "Alabama."

Cassie Gaines, one of two "Honkette" backup singers, brought her brother Steve into the band last summer as third guitarist. The band's other members included pianist Billy Powell, drummer Artimus Pyle, and backup singer Leslie Ann Hawkins.

The group emerged from the Jacksonville, Fla., area in 1973, taking its name from a high school teacher named Leonard Skinner, whom some of the band members disliked.

Skynyrd made its name in the rock world the hard way, touring endlessly with such Southern rock brethren as the Allman Brothers Band before emerging as a headline act.

The band featured its three-guitar lineup in more than 200 concerts a year, building a loyal grass-roots following but prompting several members to quit because of the grueling pace.

It reached the peak of its popularity this summer, riding on "One More From The Road," a live, greatest hits package that has sold more than one million copies. Other platinum albums were "Pronounced Lehn-er-d Skin-er-d" and "Second Helping."

A disc called "Street Survivors" was released 10 days before the crash and quickly sold almost 500,000 copies, a spokesman for Skynyrd's record company said Friday.

Beatles monument proposal opposed by Liverpool group

Liverpool, England (AP) — A plan for a monument to the Beatles, who put this grimy port city on the map in the 1960s and dominated pop music for more than a decade, has met rebuff in their home town.

The City Council's General Services Committee voted 11-9 Wednesday night against erecting a monument to the four Liverpool natives.

"In my opinion they're not worthy of a place in our history," said city councillor Roy Stoddard, 59, in explaining his negative vote.

"They couldn't sing for toffee," said another city father, Tony McVeigh, who also cast a nay vote. "They ended up taking drugs and bringing discredit to the city."

The issue now goes before the full council. "How narrow-minded, how short-sighted, and how typically out of touch with what people think and feel," the Liverpool Echo commented in an editorial Thursday.

The newspaper said that the since-disbanded pop group had a special talent that is "indelibly written in the history of popular music" and that committee members were in a "remote ivory tower."

"The councillors don't seem to realize just what a world phenomenon the Beatles are," commented Alan Williams, the group's first manager in Liverpool. "There should be a complete museum and tourist industry in Liverpool, let alone a single monument."

"They'll be recognized as the greatest composers of this century. Many famous composers in history have been drug addicts, and even homosexuals, but that doesn't stop them from being honored as great artists."

John Chambers, 29, an unemployed ship's carpenter, is behind the plan to put up the monument to the Beatles — John Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr. He launched an appeal for $31,500 and is organizing several rock concerts to help raise money. An anonymous London businessman has offered $875 to start the fund.

The plan was to erect a statue in a downtown shopping center a few hundred yards from the site of the Cavern Club, where the Beatles got their start in the early 1960s.

"It's a disgrace that there's virtually nothing in the city for the tourists coming here to see the places like the Cavern and Penny Lane," Chambers said.

Penny Lane is a Liverpool street the Beatles used as a song title.

Robert Randall holds U.S.-supplied marijuana joints.

Man and his pot dealer, Uncle Sam, are at odds

Washington (AP) — Robert Randall is at odds with his marijuana dealer. He gets 75 joints a week from the government to cope with an eye disease, but thinks federal officials aren't doing enough for others who might be helped by the illegal drug.

Randall, 29, has glaucoma, a disease that destroys the optic nerve and can cause blindness. He has received the government-grown grass for a year as part of an experiment to determine if it will sufficiently relieve eye pressure to keep his sight from deteriorating.

It is currently illegal for doctors to prescribe marijuana except in a handful of government-sanctioned experiments. Marijuana is being used experimentally for glaucoma and to help cancer patients avoid nausea while they undergo chemotherapy.

The government currently is considering a change in regulations to allow doctors to prescribe marijuana without special federal permission. A government advisory panel will take up the question on Nov. 16.

Randall claims marijuana has medical uses that the government is unwilling to recognize.

Federal health officials say some test results with glaucoma and chemotherapy are promising but not as conclusive as Randall makes them sound. And they are annoyed at his proselytizing on behalf of marijuana as a medicine. Randall has lectured and is working on a book.

"He tends to distort reality on a continuing basis," charged Robert C. Petersen, an associate director in the National Institute on Drug Abuse's research division.

Randall says he began smoking marijuana in 1968 and his glaucoma was diagnosed in 1972. The following year he felt that marijuana was easing his eye pressure so he began to "self-medicate." Later he discovered that government research in 1970 indicated marijuana eased eye pressure.

Randall, who says he lost 90 per cent of his vision, can see well enough with glasses to drive. He also takes two conventional drugs for glaucoma.

Dr. Edward C. Tocus, chief of the drug abuse staff at the Food and Drug Administration's bureau of drugs, said, "He feels he's getting response (from marijuana). He's totally biased. There are people who take the drug in similar conditions and it doesn't work for them."

Tocus said Randall is "psychologically dependent" on marijuana.

Petersen said there are many unanswered questions about marijuana's efficacy in medicine.

"In no sense is marijuana curative. It's just a palliative. It reduces eye pressure," Petersen said. "Will it work for five or 10 or 15 years? Will an individual become tolerant of the effects?"

Petersen said many glaucoma sufferers are elderly and may not be able to take such side effects from smoking marijuana as "psychological disturbance and an increase in heart rate." Also, if marijuana works, it might be better to apply it directly to the eye rather than indirectly by smoking it, he said.

The use of marijuana to reduce the side effects of chemotherapy is "maybe the most promising that may come out," Petersen said.

Randall, who favors legalization of marijuana for recreational use, said there is a strong comparison between his fight and the controversy over Laetrile, the apricot-pit derivative banned by the FDA but promoted by some as a cancer cure.

"Both are drugs that are prohibited by the government and that individuals desire to use, and we get into the question of who has control over what I put into my body," said Randall.

Committee votes to unbalance taxpaying

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Finance Committee voted Friday to break with tradition and raise Social Security payroll taxes more for employers than for employees.

But the committee failed to reach final agreement on a bill to finance Social Security into the next century. Chairman Russell Long, D-La., said the panel would meet again.

Because of that, Friday's vote conceivably could be undone. Since its inception in 1935, Social Security has been financed by payroll taxes paid equally by employers and employees.

The fund now is running a $5 billion-a-year deficit and, unless Congress acts, it will run out of money in the early 1980s. To avoid this, both houses of Congress are preparing bills which, among other steps, would raise social Security taxes. The question is: whose taxes will be raised?

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., proposed a formula Friday under which the wage "base" — that portion of a worker's pay on which both he and his employer pay Social Security tax — would rise much faster for employers than for employees.

The base is now $16,500 for calculating both the employer's and the employee's tax.

Under Nelson's plan, in 1979 it would go to $19,500 for employees and $50,000 for employers (a reduction from an earlier committee plan to push the employer base to $100,000). In 1985, Nelson would push the employee base to $30,300; the employer base to $75,000.

Nelson argued this provides the needed financing for Social Security without putting too much tax burden on workers.

Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., proposed an alternate plan which would tax employers and employees equally. That would mean a steeper tax increase for workers than Nelson proposes — specifically, $65 more than Nelson's plan for an "average" worker in 1987.

Curtis said Nelson's plan, which he summed up as "let's soak the employer," would result in more inflation, because the higher taxes would be passed on to consumers.

The vote on the Curtis proposal was 9-9, which meant that it was rejected, because a proposal loses on a tie vote. The panel then accepted Nelson's plan 16-1.

The tie vote was the key one, and if the committee reconsiders the issue, it technically is subject to change.

50% increase in federal grazing fees proposed

Denver (AP) — Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus announced a proposal Friday to increase by about 50% the fees that the nation's 25,000 cattle and sheep raisers pay to graze their stock on public lands. He said the increases would total an extra $28 million a year.

The proposed increases were immediately attacked as "unfair and unrealistic" by the National Cattlemen's Association and the National Wool Growers Association.

In a joint statement, the associations said the fees increases were "part of an overall plan to force livestock production off public lands."

Cattle and sheep raisers now pay $1.51 a month for each animal they graze on lands on which they lease grazing rights from the Bureau of Land Management. The fee for grazing on U.S. Forest Service lands is $1.60 per animal each month.

Andrus said he and Agriculture Secretary Robert Bergland were recommending increases that would raise those rates to a single fee of $2.38 a month for each animal.

Most of the public lands used for grazing are in 11 Western states, although Nebraska has some in the Panhandle.

Andrus said the increases, if adopted, would be implemented in stages starting next February. The increase in the first year would be to no more than $1.89 a month, and fees would increase no more than 12% a year thereafter until reaching $2.38 a month, he said.

Realtors group chooses officers

David G. Mitten of Fremont was named Realtor of the Year Friday at the closing session of the 60th annual convention of the Nebraska Realtors Association meeting in Lincoln.

Mitten, who recently was appointed by Gov. J. James Exon to the Nebraska Real Estate Commission, was recognized for his "outstanding contributions to his community and his leadership to the real estate profession."

A Kearney man, Walter F. Deyle, was elected president of the association for the coming year succeeding Gerald L. Schleich of Lincoln.

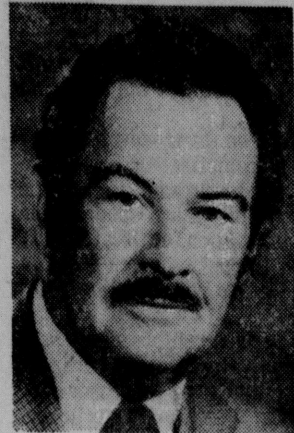

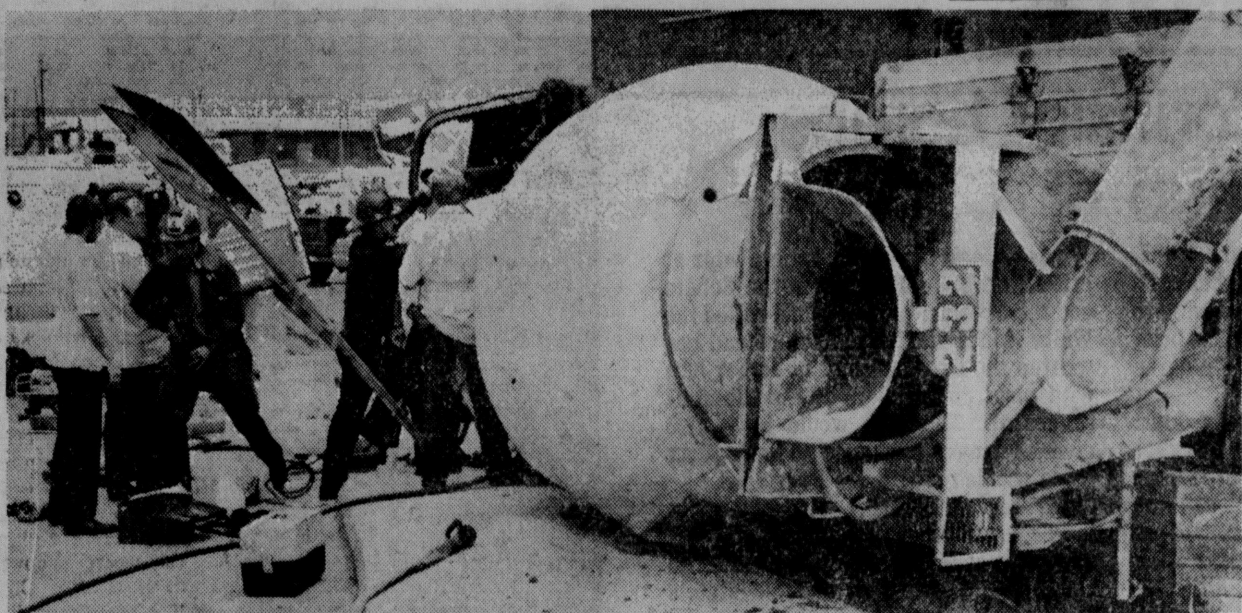

Rodger O. Lindwall of Omaha was elected president-elect. Realtors were challenged by the national president of the Farm and Land Institute to dedicate themselves to becoming more involved in the defense of personal liberty "before it's too late."

Cyril M. Kuefler from St. Cloud, Minn., told the realtors Friday that the personal freedom of Americans is "being eroded away one freedom at a time."

"We are reluctant to come to grips with those nibbling away at our personal freedom," he said, adding that "liberty rights are in the hearts of men and women" and "when it dies, no constitution or law can save it," Kuefler said.

Americans must inform themselves about the issues and let their representatives in government know how they feel about "issue after issue," he said.

"We must not compromise the principles... and the time to step forward is now," he added.

Cement truck hits the road

Charles B. Long, 21, was short on luck late Friday afternoon as the cement truck he was driving toppled while making a right turn at 9th and N Sts. Long, of 3711 N. 14th St., was trapped in the cab for several minutes, and was freed from the wreckage after fire department rescue workers cut through the top of the truck. He was treated at Lincoln General Hospital and released, police said.

Farm land value dip concerns realtors

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

Land values are at best leveling off and in many cases are substantially lower than they were a year ago in most rural areas of the state, according to realtors attending the Nebraska real estate convention in Lincoln.

"There are a few places in the nation where land prices are actually up, but in general leveling or lower prices are the trend," Bill Weir of Imperial, a past president of the realtors group, said Friday.

"The poorer land seems to be dropping in value the most," he said. "In our area good pasture land that was selling for $450 an acre is bringing $250."

Engard Lynn of Gothenburg said even some of the state's best irrigated land in the heart of Dawson County is declining in value. "A year ago we had a good irrigated tract bring $2,454 an acre at auction that would have trouble bringing $1,750 now," Lynn said.

Lynn cited other sales of irrigated land at prices well below the previous years prices.

Weir blamed the drop in the cattle and grain prices in relation to costs. "It is the rising cost that is killing farmers," Weir said. "They are really getting squeezed."

Ranches also are dropping in value, Weir said.

"A land owner in Arthur County turned down $124 an acre a year ago for his place that sold at auction at $63 an acre. I know of another ranch that brought $115 an acre that would have brought $168 just 10 months ago," he said.

Lynn cited a farm he described as "A beautiful piece of land near Minden," which dropped $400 per acre in value last year.

Lynn and Willard Burney of Hartington agreed that there are still non-farm investors interested in buying land, but Burney said "It is smart money. They want good property."

The realtors said they think there may be some foreign money involved in some land purchases, but that getting data or proof is extremely difficult. For example, "you will have a Nebraska corporation owned in part by local citizens and in part by a Delaware corporation," Weir said, "and you can't find out who owns a Delaware corporation."

Delaware corporations don't necessarily mean that it is money from another nation, he added. "I have known of people who for reasons of their own chose to own land in this fashion even as citizens of this state."

John C. Gourlay of Lincoln has been elected president of the Nebraska Innocents Alumni Association, an honorary organization at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, for 1977-78.

Other officers are John DeWulf, Lincoln, vice president; Arnold Stern, Omaha, secretary, and Bob Bartee, Lincoln, treasurer.

These are trying days for Amtrak, the national rail passenger service. If the nation does not "want to build and support a properly operated system, then maybe we should eliminate it entirely." These strong words were spoken by Amtrak President Paul Reistrup on Oct. 10 in reaction to policy directives from Amtrak's governing authorities, Congress and the Department of Transportation. Reistrup's basic complaint was that Congress has not appropriated enough money for Amtrak to provide the services the department has ordered.

Beginning Oct. 30, Amtrak will cut service on many of its routes, including an average of 22 trains a day in the Northeast (Washington to Boston) Corridor, the most heavily traveled passenger train route in the nation. And a 1/2 to 1/3 increase of from 2 1/2 to 5 per cent is slated to begin on most Amtrak routes the same day.

The reasons for the proposed cutbacks, Amtrak officials say, is congressional refusal to appropriate enough money. Amtrak had requested an operating budget of $534.1 million for the 1978 fiscal year that began Oct. 1. But the House and Senate Appropriations Committees trimmed the budget to $488.5 million.

The cut has "thrown us behind on the modernization of our fleet of passenger cars and locomotives and therefore worsened the operating losses," Reistrup said. He and the Amtrak board of directors subsequently asked Congress for a $56.5 million supplemental appropriation for fiscal 1978. If the appropriation does not come through, Amtrak officials say, the service cuts beginning Oct. 30 will be followed by more cutbacks after Jan. 1.

Amtrak's original aim was to save rail passenger service from extinction. In 1971, the private railroads were suffering losses of some $500-million a year on passenger service. Routes had been cut back sharply and overall efficiency hampered by old equipment and worn-out tracks. Amtrak's performance overall during the last six years has been spotty, but there has been improvement. Ridership has risen an average of 7 per cent a year in the last few years. The basic problem — that Amtrak does not own the tracks or haul or repair its own trains — remains. Repair work is done by private railroads under contract. This has led to indifferent service. One result is that Amtrak has consistently operated at a deficit.

'Senator No' looks unbeatable

Tom Wicker

Greensboro, N.C. — "Can you imagine," State Sen. McNeill Smith asked an audience recently, "anyone voting against education for handicapped children?" And just as he expected, shocked gasps came back from the crowd when he told them that North Carolina's right-wing Republican Sen. Jesse Helms had done just that.

Such votes, and plenty of them, have led the News and Observer of Raleigh to refer to Helms as "Senator No." And there's not much doubt that if Jesse Helms can be defeated in his race for re-election next year, it will be because of his negative voting record in his first six years in the Senate.

Helms and his supporters—notably Tom Ellis, the Raleigh lawyer who masterminded Ronald Reagan's vital North Carolina primary victory in 1976—are not intimidated. The senator has been campaigning a weekend or two in the state every month this year, offering no suggestion that he is moderating his arch-conservative stance; and as one local joke has it, he sounds lately "as if his opponent is General Torrijos."

The Helms race is interesting in itself, but also because across the border to the south, another Southern Democrat-turned-Republican, J. Strom Thurmond, faces a tough challenge from Charles D. "Pug" Ravenel, while out in Texas, Sen. John Tower also will be strongly challenged in 1978. It's at least possible, therefore, that the Democrats might knock out three of the Senate's most conservative Republicans in a single election year.

On paper, the relative new-comer, Helms, looks more vulnerable than the veteran senators Thurmond and Tower. He was elected North Carolina's first Republican senator in this century in the Nixon landslide of 1972, when George McGovern's candidacy helped pull down a Democratic nominee, Rep. Nick Galifianakis, who also suffered a state party split. Nixon himself made a late campaign trip here on Jesse Helms' behalf. Even so, Helms' victory was relatively narrow, although he ran ahead of another Republican, James Holshouser, who was elected governor.

Since then, Jimmy Carter has recaptured respectability for the National Democratic party in the South. Last year, the Republicans offered no serious threat to hang on to the governor's office. Next year, if any president campaigns here, it will be Carter for the Democratic nominee. The Democratic registration age has increased to about 1.8 million, to 600,000 Republicans. And there is some possibility of Republican defections from Helms, since he and the victorious Reaganites froze Governor Holshouser—Gerald Ford's chairman—out of the delegation to the Kansas City convention in 1976.

But that's only on paper. Lots of those "Democrats" are as conservative as Helms. Even his opponents concede the senator has been assiduous in Washington, ever-ready to help the homefolks. Through something called the North Carolina Congressional Club, he has built a solid conservative organization; through Richard Viguerie, the conservative fund-raiser, he had generated by mid-1977 $1.4 million by direct mail solicitation—although perhaps no more than 40 percent of that sum is "profit" over the cost of the mailings.

Helms has good "name identification," is rated a vigorous campaigner and in Ellis has one of North Carolina's shrewdest and toughest political operators. In short, says one experienced state political analyst, the senator can overcome his changed circumstances from 1972 through "incumbency, money and organization."

The "consensus choice" as the strongest Democratic nominee seems to be Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, who might not run. Once an aide to former Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., Edmisten now is pondering a $15,000 poll taken for him by Peter Hart; apparently it shows Helms "beatable," but only after a hard and costly campaign. Edmisten, who probably could keep the attorney general's office as long as he wanted it, is not sure he wants to risk or endure such a campaign, but plans a decision by mid-November.

Already in the race is Luther Hodges Jr., son of the former governor and Kennedy administration commerce secretary. The board chairman of the big North Carolina National Bank, Hodges is a political unknown with an impressive name, who probably will have impressive "establishment" support.

McNeill Smith, also a sure contender in next May's Democratic primary, is an outspoken progressive who probably would clash most directly with Helms on the issues. A respected figure, he is discounted by some observers as too liberal; but a leading Helms strategist suggested that Smith might more nearly than any other candidate generate "intensity" among his supporters and "polarize" the opposition to Helms.

Among numerous lesser possibilities, the most interesting is State Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, a slambang campaigner who might run if Edmisten does not. But North Carolina political buffs, asked who might beat "Senator No," tend to answer in one way or another, "none of the above."

Sen. Zorinsky bombs with snub of Carter

A contributor to the letters-to-the-editor column today takes Nebraska's Sen. Ed Zorinsky to task for refusing to accompany President Carter on his brief midlands swing this weekend. We agree with the criticism.

The President will address Iowa Democrats and talk to farmers in that state, then land at Offutt Air Force Base near Omaha for a briefing. Zorinsky was invited to fly in with Carter, but said no. The senator said he didn't want to stick the taxpayers with paying for his commercial flight to Des Moines, where he would have met the President, and for the return trip to Washington.

Sen. Zorinsky in this instance is as shortsighted as he is mean-spirited.

Such trips are standard political stuff, of course, and Zorinsky has become well-known for his disdain of standard political stuff.

But such trips also afford our elected representatives a chance to talk directly to the President about overriding national and regional concerns. What about farm prices? What about the prospects for gasoline rationing? What about water policy? What about national defense, a topic close to many of his constituents and one certain to be on the President's mind because of his Strategic Air Command briefing today?

Sen. Zorinsky has become a whiz at criticizing his colleagues in the Senate and the President, too. He has called the White House staff incompetent and has written the President not to bother him with pleas for support unless the staff shapes up. This trip would have also given Zorinsky a chance to talk about those problems with the President.

Of course, Zorinsky can counter with the argument that he has access to the President in Washington if he needs to communicate his own and his state's concerns.

But this trip would have been a visible indication that the senator is on the job, and a chance to mend fences with the White House.

Saving the taxpayers the price of a round trip ticket may grab some headlines, but it is not in the best interests of his constituents.

A more thoughtful senator would have paid his own way to Des Moines and still met with the President of the United States.

Along with Omaha Congressman John Cavanaugh, he could have brought the leader of the nation on to Nebraska.

The people of the state are strong, however, and can probably survive six years of having one of their senators turning everybody off in Washington.

Bail bond's poor record

This week's hijacking at Grand Island has again pointed the finger at the judiciary's bail bond system. The hijacker, Michael Hannan, was free on $25,000 bond, posted in connection with a Georgia bank robbery charge.

We do not know what Hannan put up to cover the bond, probably 10 percent. But it probably doesn't make any difference what he put up, so long as he was able to go free.

His case is one in a recent series that includes sexual assaults and murders allegedly perpetrated by men free on bond from prior pending criminal charges. And every examination of crime in the country invariably raises the question of crimes committed by individuals free on bond.

Very obviously, the bond system in this nation needs to be examined. We are not ready to say it should be eliminated, because it is rooted in constitutional law. It is based on the theory that incarceration prior to actual conviction constitutes an infringement upon individual rights.

The theory is certainly a laudable one, backing up the legal principle of innocence until proven guilty but it is not working well at all in practice. We are unsure of the alternative but we certainly have reservations about the current situation.

To lock an individual up, without recourse, upon their being charged with a crime holds some serious dangers but we ought to be able to do better than we are. One fault with the present system might lie with the posting of only a small percentage of the actual bond, which seems to fall frequently in the area of 10 percent.

Thus, rather than posting the full bond, the accused puts up only a small percentage, with the bonding company assuming liability for the remainder. We should examine a higher percentage requirement of the bond on the part of the accused.

Perhaps too, we could give more thought to the nature of the crime committed and the evidence against the accused in the setting of bond. This would undoubtedly put a greater burden on the courts at a time when they are already overburdened but that matter ought to be settled on its own merits.

It seems to us the legal profession has an obligation to examine the present bail bond system and seek to curtail the growing crime on the part of people being freed under that system.

Saving the press from itself

Charles B. Seib

Washington — One recent departure from the federal payroll will cause no joy in Mediaville. Reed Irvine has taken early retirement from his $44,000-a-year job with the Federal Reserve Board to devote full time to his own aggressive brand of press monitoring.

Irvine's name is not familiar to most customers of the news business, but it is well known in the media. It is particularly well known in the editorial offices and executive suites of the "New York-Washington axis"—the Washington Post, the New York Times, the networks and Time and Newsweek.

Irvine is the founder, chairman and driving force of Accuracy in Media, better known as AIM. It bills itself as a media watchdog devoted to "accuracy and fairness in reporting on critical issues facing America."

AIM takes the position that the media have exercised their vast power in a biased and therefore dangerous way. Its avowed mission is to correct that bias, which it sees as having a decided leftward lean. In the process, it reveals a tilt to the right of its own.

Irvine started AIM eight years ago. In its early days it was a shoestring operation, making its points mainly in a torrent of letters to the editor.

Several years ago, in writing about a tiff between Irvine and columnist Jack Anderson, I reported AIM's budget was about $60,000 a year. Now it is over $200,000 a year, and one staff member predicts it will soon cross the $250,000 mark. AIM does not disclose the source of its funds, except to say that they come mostly as small contributions from individuals.

Irvine puts pressure on the press in a variety of ways. He continues to be a prolific writer of letters to editors. He also writes a weekly column that he says is used "more or less regularly" in about 80 papers.

He has bought stock in the Post, the Times and ABC, CBS and RCA (which owns NBC) and regularly attends stockholder meetings. There, he engages corporate brass in discussions of their shortcomings as AIM sees them. While these confrontations seldom are given much attention in the press, Irvine uses them to good effect in his semimonthly newsletter, AIM Report.

AIM's main public exposure is through paid newspaper ads, a device Irvine uses both to get his points across and raise funds. Sometimes the ads severely test news executives' commitment to a free and open press.

Early this year, when the Washington Post printed an Associated Press story on an AIM conference instead of a United Press International story that stressed attacks on the media and the Post, Irvine had an ad prepared. It featured the UPI story, with the word "CENSORED" blazoned across it. The Post swallowed hard and accepted the ad, which included an AIM fund-raising pitch.

More recently, Irvine tried to place an ad criticizing the Post's coverage of Orlando Letelier, a former Chilean cabinet minister who was murdered. The ad charged the Post with a "whitewash" in a report on documents found in Letelier's briefcase.

The Post rejected the ad, claiming that it contained inaccurate, unsubstantiated and possibly libelous statements. The New York Times and the Washington Star also refused to carry it, and it eventually appeared in the eastern edition of the Wall Street Journal, slightly expurgated.

AIM now has a full-time staff of five, plus some part-time help, but the voice of AIM is still the voice of Reed Irvine. The ads, the letters, the Reports and, of course, his signed column, all bear his stamp.

The Reports probably give the best indication of his interests. Recent ones have dealt with the Letelier case, the Panama Canal treaties (AIM claims the press has been disgracefully soft on the treaties), articles on Cuba and Russia in the National Geographic and allegations of press neglect of Communist atrocities in Southeast Asia.

Going beyond his specific concerns, Irvine's concept of the role of the press in a free society probably was stated best in a speech last fall to Missouri journalists. He put the question: "Is it true that the freer the press is the more secure will all our freedoms be?"

His answer was no. "No society is truly free without a free press, but the existence of a free press does not guarantee a free society. Unfortunately, history indicates that a free press may contribute to its own destruction and to the destruction of all other freedoms."

In other words, a free press is necessary but dangerous if misused. And is it being dangerously misused? Irvine thinks so: "There is some reason to question whether or not we have gone too far for our own good, perhaps creating a monster which may bring about the destruction of many of the freedoms we cherish, including the freedom of the press."

So Irvine and his colleagues are, in their view, out to save the press from itself. They are going about it zealously and ingeniously, and if the increased budget is any indication, with growing support.

To what effect? It sticks in my craw, but I'll say it: Irvine and his AIM are good for the press.

Public doubts energy performance

Kevin Phillips

Midway through Jimmy Carter's two-week campaign to sell the American people on the merits of his energy program, the public opinion polls suggest that his road is definitely uphill.

To date, April-October collapse of public belief in and support for Mr. Carter's energy program has been little short of extraordinary. Two polls make the point best — one by NBC News (early October) and one by Louis Harris (late September).

The NBC News poll shows public approval of the job Mr. Carter is doing in energy policy slipping to just 32 percent in October. A whopping 62 percent gave him negative marks, and 6 percent had no opinion.

Back in April, Mr. Carter's energy ratings had been 47 percent positive, 45 percent negative. Then in May, they slipped to 51 percent negative, 43 percent positive, then to 52 percent negative, 41 percent positive in June. August found the President receiving 54 percent negative, 39 percent positive marks on energy. All in all, the slip-page over the last six months must be described as substantial.

Asked specifically whether Congress should adopt Mr. Carter's energy program, 41 percent of those polled said yes, 31 percent said no, and 28 percent weren't sure. Support for passage is down from 49 percent in April.

Louis Harris found much the same thing. In a survey released on Sept. 22, Harris proclaimed "the American people are in basic agreement with the version of President Carter's energy program that was recently passed by the House of Representatives." He found the public supporting Mr. Carter on strip mining, insulation tax credits, crude oil taxation and natural gas price levels, with opposition only to increasing the gasoline tax and taxing gas guzzlers.

Just a few weeks later, though, a new Harris sampling found the public with very different viewpoints. In survey results released Oct. 14, energy was identified as one of three areas — the other two being economic policy and international affairs — where Mr. Carter's ratings were in the process of collapsing.

Harris's new numbers presumably hit the White House like a lash. On his "handling of the energy crisis," Carter received a 58-33 percent negative rating. His "overall energy program" received a negative rating of 57-33 percent.

Small wonder, then, that President Carter has decided to launch an attack on the oil companies and the energy industry. Polls — not least those by his own surveytaker, Patrick Caddell — continue to show oil company actions and attitudes unpopular with some 60-70 percent of the American people. Numbers of this magnitude do indeed suggest that the President may have a chance to shift some of the blame from his own shortcomings onto those of the oil companies.

There is, however, a major caveat. Mr. Carter's own 1977 emphasis on convincing the nation of the genuineness of the energy crisis has succeeded in eliminating some of the previous "phony crisis" anti-oil company sentiment, and a survey released this summer by Michael Rowan Associates (admittedly conducted on behalf of Mobil Oil) showed a strong 1973-77 increase in favorable opinion-molder attitudes toward the oil companies. Among journalists, congressmen and professional people, oil companies are no longer the bogeymen they were from 1973 to early 1977. And this, in turn, may help account for the considerable number of liberal congressmen and media willing to publicly blame the Carter administration rather than the oil companies for the Washington energy debacle.

Careful analysis suggests one more point. The collapse of Mr. Carter's energy performance ratings goes hand in hand with erosion of public belief in his foreign policy, economic policy, moral inspiration and general conduct of office. It's quite possible that the President can succeed in using energy politicking to rebuild his standing in the polls, but it's also quite possible that he will not be able to rebuild faith in his energy policy until he has rebuilt his across-the-board ratings.

What has Zorinsky done?

Senator criticized

Lincoln, Neb.

I wish we had a senator who realized the value of spending several hours with the President of the United States.

If (Sen. Edward) Zorinsky would have used this opportunity to speak up for Nebraska's farmers instead of "worrying" about the price of a plane ticket, he might have finally accomplished something.

His constant bitching about the political process might make good headlines, but what has he done?

Ed's a joke!

Health bill debate

Lincoln, Neb.

Senator Zorinsky proclaimed the other day that he was against the Kennedy Health

Today's Mail

Bill because, as with Social Security, the government has demonstrated it cannot operate in a solvent manner.

I put this in the same category with someone who would say a bill was objectionable because somebody of a certain nationality or religion sponsored it.

Up until this past year Social Security has been sound and it is now going through a readjustment period. It will soon be on track again.

The other night I heard a discussion by some of the outstanding authorities in the country on our medical health and they did not put the blame on government but rather distributed it around between the public, the medical profession and the government and they thought wisely that they had to work together to make it work efficaciously. No second class groups, no idiots, no goats, not any simplistic answers, no angels, no saints, no one-sidedness and maximum sophistication.

Sewers, yes; center, no

Lincoln, Neb.

On the first weekend in September 1977, devastating floods hit many sections of the City of Lincoln causing huge amounts of property damages. In all these sections affected by these floods, larger and more efficient storm sewers are needed in the present and in the future city planning.

For the present and future need for more efficient storm sewers, a $6.8 million bond issue has been put on the ballot of a special election on November 8, 1977.

I urge the voters of Lincoln to vote "yes" for this bond issue and vote "no" to the $7 million performance arts center bond issue, thus saving tax payers money of $7 million and a $0.2 of a million and benefitting all the citizens of the city instead of a few non-taxable groups.

Justice questioned

Lincoln, Neb.

What kind of justice do we have in this state, anyway?

I was furious when I read the news item, "Grandparents Claim to Boy Upheld" in The Star, Thursday, Oct. 13.

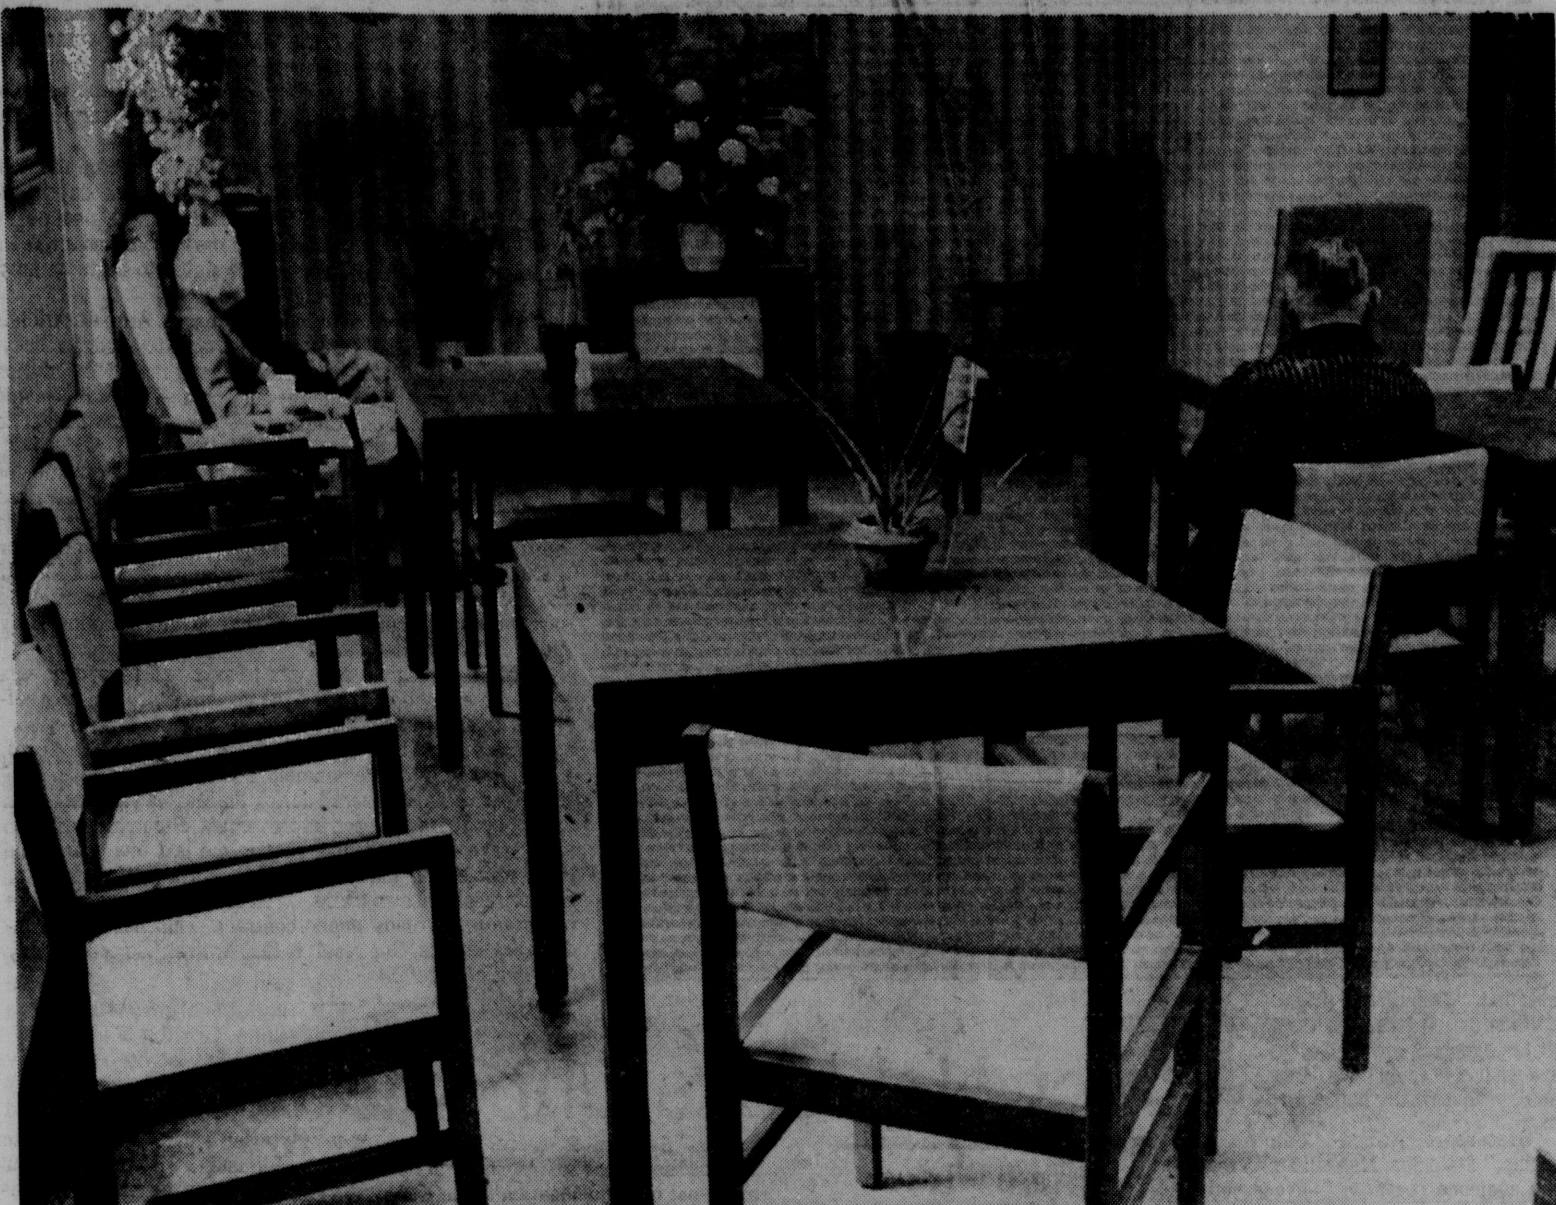

Why wasn't the mother given custody of her son by the Nebraska Supreme Court when she was never found to be an unfit parent?

The lower court obviously made a mistake the first time when it gave custody to the father.

It is difficult to understand, too, why parents who have abused their children over and over again get their children returned to them by the courts and eventually many of them end up dead at the hands of their parents. Yet a mother who hasn't even been declared unfit doesn't get the chance to prove that she can be a fit parent to her own child.

This is indeed a sad state of affairs, a great miscarriage of justice, a poor reflection on our judicial system.

Living thrives at nursing home

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

"When will you understand that I'm not really old at all? The thoughts that fill my mind are young as spring."

This quotation, by noted music therapist Deanna Edwards, directs attention to a display of art, crafts and activities by residents at Lancaster Manor.

It could be a motto for the entire county-run nursing home.

"We have something for everyone," says the home's Director Garriett Williams. "There are as many things for people to do here as they could want to do. There isn't a day that there isn't something special going on."

A nursing home is not a place to die, but a place to live, Williams believes.

"Getting old doesn't have to be a hassle," he says. "If any of us are fortunate enough to get that way we should be able to have as pleasant a time as possible."

Williams, who has been administering the home since January, gives his age as "35, going on 70."

He enjoys working with the aged "because I'm going to be one, and I want to have a better deal."

When he came to the Manor to fill the shoes vacated by former Director Jerry Gibson, the home had a reputation for high quality care combined with higher operating costs.

Williams pledged to the County Board to "trim the fat" from the budget without compromising quality. After nine months on the job, he feels satisfied that he has kept his word.

Under Williams the daily operating cost per resident has decreased from $28 to $25.50, while the state Welfare Department has increased its per diem payment to the home from $15.50 to $16.50 per resident. The county picks up the difference.

County commissioners say Williams has saved the county more than $300,000, out of a $2.5 million budget, through efficiency measures.

By substituting fruit juices for canned or bottled soft drinks, for example, the Manor has saved an estimated $1,500 per month.

The biggest saving has come about through centralized purchasing, Williams says.

The home's annual grocery bill has been reduced by $100,000, merely by using more competitive buying techniques.

Special services for the home's 287 residents are still there. The budget includes $89,000 for activities, and an additional $27,000 per year for counseling and related services.

Many nursing homes' activities consist of an endless round of "bingo and crafts," Williams notes. Lancaster Manor has bingo, too, and all kinds of crafts, but also has a men's club, a diner's club, movie-going parties, excursions in the country — "residents live from event to event, not just from day to day or meal to meal."

A big extravaganza is planned each month. In September, it was a barn dance, wheelchairs and all; this month an Oktoberfest.

A diversity of activity keeps people physically healthy as well as mentally alert, says Williams. "People become ill because they don't have anything to do," he believes.

The home also provides a wide range of counseling services, including economic and social guidance for residents who have left the Manor. "Our responsibility to the residents goes beyond the fact that they live here," he explains.

"This is the kind of work you have to like to stay in it," Williams says. "Society has a stigmatic view of the elderly. A lot of people just can't adjust."

But he adds: "There's nothing depressing about working in a nursing home, if it's a good one."

"I believe you have to run a facility in accordance with the views of the people who live there," he said. He has established a strict dress code since "jeans, sweatshirts and bare midriffs are not acceptable to oldsters."

He has also begun a campaign to brighten up the building's appearance. Newly-remodeled areas have Easter-egg paint job and colorful draperies.

"I got into nursing home work more by accident than design," Williams said. He has a degree in social science but his wife Sharilyn was a geriatric nurse.

When he started working for Continental Care Centers, an Omaha-based firm which operates 40 homes in nine states, he was seeking an opportunity to work with his wife.

For a time, he was administrator of a home in Iowa City while his wife was his head nurse. "It had a disastrous effect on our marriage," he recalls, "because we both were married to the business."

Williams then became a traveling coordinator, setting up new nursing homes around the region. "It was great experience — I've been inside at least 500 nursing homes — but I got tired of living in airplanes."

When the Lancaster Manor position opened up, Williams was eager to settle down again. Besides, "my forte was administration."

Life Begins At Forty

By Joanne Farris

We read a lot about the myths of aging. One surprising result of the Louis Harris poll, "The Myth and Reality of Aging in America," was that persons over 65 see old age for others as being pretty much the way the myths say it is. This group (the over 65s) are not very poor or lonely or in poor health or lacking medical care or not having enough friends or things to do. Only 23% of them seriously fear crime.

Yet, they see themselves as exceptions; the myths of aging apply to all the other old people, not to them.

The Mental Health Association has come out with a mental health quiz, about one aspect of aging. I invite you to take the quiz, and then check your score against the results at the end of the column. Mark each item true or false.

1. An older person who is having a heart attack may display signs of being highly confused and irrational.

2. A decline in intellectual abilities is often a result of specific disease processes rather than a result of growing old.

3. One out of every four persons in the United States has someone in his/her family with a mental health problem serious enough to require professional attention.

4. Poor nutrition in later life may lead to intellectual impairment.

5. Since 1964 there has been a steady reduction in the number of aged patients in state and county mental hospitals.

6. More than five per cent of those who are 65 years of age and older live in institutions.

7. Older persons are not capable of learning new things.

8. Senility is an actual medical term.

9. Intelligence tests show that verbal abilities decrease as one gets older.

10. Even when a person has good health and an available partner, it is not possible to have an active sex life after the age of 80.

If rushing gets you down, here are a few ways to beat the clock.

1. List tasks in the order of their importance, and do the most important ones first. If you have to let the less important ones go, they'll be there to do another day.

2. Schedule similar jobs together. Once you get in the swing of an activity it becomes easy to do related tasks.

3. Buy clothing and appliances that are easy to care for and have low maintenance. Problem possessions are thieves of time.

4. Before you take on a new commitment that involves time, ask yourself these questions: "Is it worth it to me?" "What can I eliminate in order to add it to my life?" "What will it do to our family life?"

Answers to the quiz are as follows. Give yourself 10 points for every true answer you made on questions 1-5. Questions 6-10 should be all answered false. What is your mental health quiz quotient?

Opening lead - seven of clubs.

Odd things sometimes happen in bridge. For example, take this deal from a team of four match. At the first table, South made a good guess at trick one when he played the club ten from dummy, winning East's king with the ace. Declarer returned the king of spades, won by West with the ace.

After winning the next club lead with the queen, South cashed three spades and the A-Q of diamonds, West showing out. Declarer then continued with the king and another diamond. East took the jack and could now do no better than cash his ace of hearts. As a result, South scored ten tricks, worth 630 points.

At the second table, West led a club also. But here declarer chose to play the queen from dummy. East covered with the king, which won, and continued with a club. South took the ace, cashed the A-Q of diamonds, and then hopefully led the ten of spades. West took the ace and cashed four club tricks, producing this position:

When West now cashed his last club, declarer got squeezed and could take no more tricks. Actually, he discarded a heart from dummy, East discarding a diamond and South a heart, but the queen of hearts shift finished South off.

So the extraordinary outcome was that at one table North-South made ten tricks, while at the other table — against the same contract and with the same opening lead — East-West made ten tricks!

There are reasons to say no

DEAR ABBY: Your recent answer to the 17-year-old girl who wanted to know what was wrong with premarital sex was good, but incomplete. Here is how I would have answered:

Dear Speaking For Teens:

There are several reasons other than fear of V.D. and pregnancy for saying no, even if your moral code or religious beliefs provide you with insufficient guidance. Among them:

1. If you ever marry, and most people still do, remaining "pure" beforehand will give your spouse less reason to be distrustful of you. This is bound to lead to a healthier and happier relationship.

2. Sex between unmarried people usually results in guilt feelings and loss of self-esteem.

3. If you're really in love, sex isn't needed to have a fulfilling relationship. And if you should discover that you aren't really in love, having had sex will make breaking up all the more painful.

4. Most people who seek premarital sex are concerned more than their own gratification than with the needs of the other person. (If that's the case, it's not love.) Why let someone use you?

Like many other good things in life, sex is too often misused.

SINGLE SEATTLE FELLOW

DEAR FELLOW: If you practice what you preach, you'll make a wonderful catch for a girl who's saving herself for marriage and expects the same of her husband.

DEAR ABBY: This may sound trivial to you, but it has caused quite a few arguments at our house.

I have been raised to clean up after myself, but my husband hasn't. His mother did everything for him, including washing his hair. The big fight is over his leaving the bathtub dirty for me to clean. Abby, I find this revolting, but if he refuses to do it, then I have to, which is the way it's been lately. I agreed to wash out the tub after him until we hear from you.

He said he would go by your decision. He says if I loved him, I'd do it. I say if he loved ME, he wouldn't ask me to. Who is right?

HIS WIFE

DEAR WIFE: The word from here is that every man, woman and child able to bathe without assistance should clean the tub after himself.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please straighten out the "John Smith Jr." and "John Smith II" confusion?

My wife wants to name our son after me, and she insists that he will be "John Smith II." I say he will be "John Smith Jr."

I know I'm right, but don't know under what circumstances a child becomes "the II."

JOHN SMITH

DEAR JOHN: A man with the identical name as his father is called "Jr." as long as his father is alive. He may drop the "Jr." after his father's death, or if he prefers, he may retain it to avoid being confused with his late father.

When a boy is named after his father who is a "Jr.," he is called "3rd." A boy who is named after his grandfather, uncle or cousin becomes "the 2nd."

There can only be one "Jr." in the family. And only one 2nd, 3rd, 4th, etc.

DEAR ABBY: Is the dinner table a place for gripes and problems? I am 12 years old, and I am sick and tired of having my dinner spoiled by a lot of unpleasant conversation every night. I know my parents have to get it out of their systems — but at the dinner table?

I know that some adults out there will say, "Since when do children tell their parents what to do and when," but we kids have rights, too, and we should be able to enjoy a peaceful dinner at home. Besides, we're not TELLING our parents, we're just ASKING them to please let us have a nice dinner with pleasant conversation.

FED UP IN HAWAII

DEAR FED UP: I agree, children do have rights, and I hope this letter will remind parents to make mealtime a happy time. Concentrate on what you're EATING — and not on what's eating YOU!

Aging myths tested

Results differed on deal

Drugs, homosexuality denied

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Grand Island — Despite some published reports to the contrary, authorities here believe the hijacker of a Frontier Airlines jet Thursday was neither a homosexual nor a drug addict.

In a wide-ranging press conference Friday, Hall County Sheriff Charles Headley and local FBI agent Dick Whitaker agreed such stories were apparently based on misinformation. It appeared most of this originated in Atlanta, Ga., where Thomas Hannan climaxed a near 15-hour hijacking escapade by committing suicide.

Whitaker particularly refuted suggestions that the ex-Grand Islander staged the hijacking because of a homosexual relationship with George David Stewart, a bank-robbing companion now jailed in Atlanta. Hannan had demanded the man's release, but the FBI agent indicated this was probably only for the sake of a normal friendship.

"We do not have any evidence of homosexual activities by Mr. Hannan and we do have denials from Stewart that there was any such relationships between them," said the agent.

The two officials also questioned reports that drugs may have brought extreme personality changes which the 29-year-old Hannan experienced following his Army service in Vietnam. The only thing regarding drugs which showed up in "a day of round-the-clock depth research," they said, was that the hijacker had sometimes used marijuana.

The FBI investigation, conducted mainly to help in negotiating the release of hostages from the plane in Atlanta, also revealed no participation by Hannan in Nazi-like activities. That report apparently originated, they said, because of Stewart's involvement.

Hannan's two and a half years in the service apparently did have strong psychological effects, however. Although he received a Bronze Star and an honorable discharge, the officials said Hannan emerged a changed man.

"He came back and rejected everything he had known prior to the service," said Whitaker. "He became anti-establishment and against big corporations."

Hearing of the hijacking, a man now living in Oregon called the FBI voluntarily to relate how he and Hannan had shared a remote Minnesota cabin for nearly two years. Whitaker said the Nebraskan then transformed himself from "a real wilderness man" to a clean-shaven resident of Berkeley, Calif. But he continued to remain much to himself.

After his graduation from Grand Island Central Catholic High School, Hannan attended three different Nebraska colleges: John F. Kennedy at Wahoo, the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and Kearney State College. He later befriended Stewart in Berkeley and the two moved to Mobile, Ala., where they resided when they robbed an Atlanta bank.

The lawman also noted that Hannan had been married briefly to a Nebraska girl. They did not elaborate or identify her further.

Both officials also said they are now satisfied that Hannan's parents had no prior knowledge of their son's hijacking intentions. But Headley acknowledged that he had felt otherwise initially.

Shortly after the 6:40 a.m. hijacking, Headley had noted that the father, local engineer W. T. Hannan, had bought his son's plane ticket and that the mother's sobbing had led inquiring officers to young Hannan's identity. At the time the sheriff felt the couple might be aware of the son's plans.

"After we got into things further, I felt very solidly that they didn't know anything of what he was going to do," said Headley. "It is doubtful that any charges will be filed against them."

As for Hannan's climactic suicide in Atlanta, the two said this came unexpectedly. The officials had been among a small group accompanying the hijacker's parents there to try to negotiate the release of hostages.

Hannan had agreed to surrender and was supposed to leave the plane with the hostages, they explained. Instead he remained on the plane, prompting his Atlanta attorney (J. Roger Thompson) to re-enter the jet to confer with him.

"The attorney talked to him for nearly 20 minutes," recalled Whitaker. "Then he suddenly turned the gun on himself and pulled the trigger."

Headley said that "despite the tragic end," he felt the situation had been well handled by all the agencies involved.

"I don't know what else could have been done," he stated. "What finally happened he did to himself."

Hostages talked of strategies

Grand Island (AP) — The passengers aboard a Frontier Airlines jetliner hijacked to Atlanta talked quietly of what they might do to abort the incident if the opportunity arose.

David Alwood, 34, related the fearful planning by the male hostages upon returning to his Grand Island home Friday.

After the women, children and two male passengers were released in Kansas City Thursday, Alwood said the remaining 11 male passengers were "corralled up front" and started talking among themselves. They discussed what might happen to them.

They were able to carry on this quick, quiet conversation while the hijacker, Thomas Michael Hannan, 29, was in the cockpit of the plane talking to a negotiator, Alwood said.

"We weren't necessarily talking about escape," Alwood said. "There was some talk of it. In case he fired the gun, which was a bolt action, that was our only hope of getting ahead of him. He would have to operate the bolt. If he had put the thing down maybe we could have grabbed it."

Although the hijacker and many of his hostages were from Grand Island or the surrounding area, Alwood said that Hannan did not seem to know any of the people aboard the plane with the exception of one man from Grand Island.

While the men awaited the outcome of negotiations in Atlanta, they avoided almost all eye-contact with Hannan. "We didn't want to make friends with him in case he decided to single one of us out," Alwood said.

At the outset of the flight, when Hannan brushed aside security guards at the Grand Island Air Park Thursday morning, Alwood said that he felt Hannan was confident and felt in control of the situation.

"We knew he was more or less calm, cool and collected," Alwood said, "and he didn't seem sporadic in his actions. There was no yelling or threatening. We kind of had the idea in the back of our minds that he was after something and we were more or less pawns and wouldn't be harmed."

"When he first got on he knew what he wanted to do and in Atlanta it was the same way," Alwood said. "But as the negotiator stalled him off he got more frustrated that he wasn't able to talk to his friend. That got to him more than anything. It changed him from being confident to being despondent."

At one time the passengers suspected that Hannan was about to give himself up when his lawyer stood at the bottom of a ladder leading to the airliner and the hijacker went to the plane's door.

"He told us we could leave but the crew didn't hear him. He had to say it several times. Then we left."

"We just got our stuff together and then got the hell out of there," Alwood said. "We wanted to get out of there but we were pretty quiet as we went down from the plane. After we were out we were elated."

The mood of the men after they were released contrasted to the pall of silence which fell on the plane's occupants as it left Grand Island on Thursday morning.

"At the beginning it was a virtually silent plane," Alwood said. "There was no talking at all except for a few small children who didn't know what was going on."

"Later, in Atlanta, we were privy to the whole conversation with the negotiator," Alwood said. "It seemed that at first the negotiator was antagonizing the guy. But later he seemed to get it together."

"I've been using most of the cliché's to describe this experience," Alwood said, "but it is like a long nightmare. It's a long, long time to sit on an airplane for 12 hours. I'm glad it's over and I hope it'll never happen again."

Alwood is an employee of the Square D Co. in Grand Island. He was on a business trip Thursday morning.

Suicidal tendencies showed in negotiations with Hannan

Atlanta (UPI) — The FBI agent who talked Thomas Michael Hannan into releasing hostages from a commandeered Frontier Airlines jet said Friday he quickly determined Hannan probably would free his captives, and felt there was a "distinct possibility" he would take his own life.

Hannan shot himself minutes after releasing 11 passengers.

"The first hour of any negotiation is the crucial hour," said Cochran, 47, a 28-year FBI veteran. He served as the direct link between a battery of FBI specialists and Hannan.

"It's when you establish your evaluation of the individual. Although the safety of the hostages was still in question, I felt optimistic about being able to obtain their release."

Another of those who negotiated with Hannan, Attorney J. Roger Thompson, said he spent "about 30 minutes and on the plane with Hannan trying to dissuade him from taking his own life."

"I don't think he was necessarily unstable," said Thompson. He said in the final hours Hannan apparently saw death as the only alternative to a long prison term.

Hannan's friend, prisoner George Stewart was among those who urged Hannan to surrender.

Atlanta Public Safety Commissioner A.

Reginald Eaves credited the "very firm statement" from Stewart with convincing Hannan to give up his passenger hostages.

Police in Mobile, Ala., where Stewart was arrested in 1973 while carrying a concealed weapon, said Stewart told investigators Hannan was his homosexual lover, but Hannan's brother, Richard, denied this. He said his brother was not a homosexual, but that Stewart was a "known homosexual."

Cochran said communications between the tower and the hijacked jet were being monitored by psychological specialists in Washington and that FBI agents immediately prepared a psychological profile of Hannan.

He said psychological data gathered by the FBI indicated Hannan "couldn't stand to see something suffer. He couldn't stand to see a dog get hit by a car."

He said it was "several remarks he made, like not being afraid to die" that led the FBI to believe Hannan might take his own life. "That was the distinct possibility," Cochran said.

Hannan's statement that "I need an honorable way out" just prior to the release of the stewardesses "was a key phrase to us. We thought he was looking for a way out to save face," said Cochran.

Security 'would not have helped'

Grand Island (UPI) — Stronger security measures could not have prevented Thursday's hijacking of a Frontier Airlines jet from the Hall County Airport, airport manager Roger Burdick said Friday.

Thomas Michael Hannan, 29, armed with a shotgun, commandeered the jet to Atlanta, where he shot himself to death.

"When a man has a gun on you, he's No. 1, and I don't know of any changes I could have made to prevent (the hijacking). I don't know of any changes we could have made in security," Burdick said.

He said the airport is in full compliance with federal security regulations.

Glenn Emmons, Frontier Airlines manager in Grand Island, said two security guards at the gate are enough and if "15 guards would have been present, it wouldn't make any difference under (Thursday's) circumstances."

Exhibit cuts competition

Ben (Obi-Wan) Kenobi of Star Wars fame, with a sword that glows in the dark, took first place in the University of Nebraska-Lincoln homecoming decorations contest.

The display at 1545 S St., made by Kappa Alpha Theta sorority and Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, won the $100 best overall decoration, said Bob Sheldon, UNL public information staff.

Other winners were best sorority display, Kappa Kappa Gamma (collaborating with Sigma Alpha Epsilon), at 616 N. 16th, for a coin display called "Knock some cents into the Buffaloes;" and best fraternity display, Theta Xi (collaborating with Pi Beta Phi, at 1535 R, for a ski slope called "Ski to Victory."

The four judges looked at 20 entries made of crepe paper, paper mache, clothes and tissue, Sheldon said. There were no entries from the non-Greek residence halls, he said.

This year's homecoming king and queen will be announced during the half-time ceremonies at the NU-Colorado game Saturday.

ASC gets permission to make loans on stored feed grain

The Nebraska Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) committee has been granted permission to make recourse distress loans on 1977 feed grain stored on the ground or in temporary storage facilities.

This means that a farmer can pile grain on the ground and still get a price support loan on that grain within certain prescribed limitations.

The maximum quantity of temporary farm-stored grain under such conditions shall be 75% of the certified or measured quantity of grain in the pile. However, there are provisions for the state or county ASC committee to reduce eligible loan quantity if necessary due to unusual conditions, such as low grade of grain in the pile.

The Commodity Credit Corporation won't assume losses in either quality or quantity for the grain for any reason, officials said.

Loans on temporary stored grain will mature in 90 days or not later than Feb. 28, 1978.

The distressed loan may be liquidated by repayment in the normal manner or it can be transferred to an approved farm storage bin or warehouse such as a local elevator, according to officials.

"This should help farmers who have a grain bin ordered but haven't been able to get it up in time for harvest. It can help too when the local elevator manages to have storage available at a later date," said Dale Heidy, an ASC spokesman.

"Provisions for the distressed loan had been requested by the state ASC committee, Gov. J. James Exon and many other interested individuals who felt it was important that more farm income become immediately available to Nebraska farmers," Heidy said.

Omaha's busing plan to continue

St. Louis (AP) — A federal appeals court ruled that the remedial busing plan now in effect for desegregating the Omaha School District shall remain in effect for the present school year.

The appellate court's action Friday was the third time it has dealt with the case and the third time it has ruled against the school district.

In June, the U.S. Supreme Court "vacated and remanded" the finding of the appellate court. At a hearing last month in St. Paul, Minn., attorneys and judges alike were confused about what exactly the high court wanted them to do.

The U.S. Justice Department contended that the Supreme Court meant for the Circuit Court to "examine the fit between the violation and the remedy" ordered earlier — to achieve racial balance.

The Justice Department and a group of black parents and children successfully sought a court order for the district to integrate its schools, resulting in the busing that began last year.

The appellate court's ruling Friday upheld their earlier rulings that the district properly corrects racial segregation through busing.

Weather warning changes possible

Omaha (AP) — The meteorologist in charge of the Little Rock, Ark., office of the National Weather Service said a survey of 29 contemporaries indicated there is room for improvement in the weather watch-warning system.

Frank Makosky spoke in Omaha at the American Meteorological Society's 10th conference on severe local storms.

Makosky said 59% of the 29 weathermen, all of whom head offices in states most affected by severe storms, said they believe they issue too many severe weather warnings.

However, Matosky said, they do not believe severe thunderstorm warnings should be eliminated, simply because the public perceives such warnings as a sort of "pre-alert" to possible tornadoes.

He said the only alternative is to reduce the number of severe thunderstorm warnings to those thunderstorms which have the potential to produce tornadoes.

Matosky said the biggest problem a tornado warning forecaster has is false reports.

Prostitution penalty increase recommended

Omaha (AP) — The penalty for prostitution should be increased, according to three city officials.

"We hope more severe fines and penalties will be more of a deterrent," Public Safety Director William McDonnell said. "We hope this will encourage the ladies of the night to move on."

Recommending the change to the Nebraska Legislature's Judiciary Committee were Police Chief Richard Andersen, Deputy Chief Jack Swanson and City Prosecutor Gary Buchino.

Until recently, there was no state law, only city ordinances, spelling out penalties for acts of prostitution, according to Buchino's office.

A new law, which has not yet become effective, provides for a $100 fine for each prostitution conviction. The city officials want the penalty hiked to six months in jail or a $1,000 fine, or both.

THE PRESENT! THE FUTURE?

The world of tomorrow will be quite a place. A button will be pushed, and it will rain. Planes will wing through the heavens at 5,000 miles an hour. Freight will be shot across the continent by missile. Hurricanes will be halted in their course and sent back to sea.

Sound fantastic? Maybe. But time has a way of making the fantastic and incredible become commonplace. Few of us marvel over television any more. We take it for granted, along with the other wonders of today's modern world.

The future is frightening for many of us to think about. The unknown has always held a basic fear in the minds of some. Coping with the problems and challenges of the present is enough for most of us.

But whatever the future holds, each of us can march more confidently into it by trusting God. Attend His church regularly.

THERE'S ALWAYS ROOM FOR YOU!

"WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?" Psalms 2:1 and Acts 4:25

This question is the first clause of the first sentence of The Second Psalm of God Almighty's Book! God Himself is quite an Author! Quite an Editor! Quite a Columnist! He is "King of Kings, Lord of Lords — Where the word of a king is, there is power — The Word of God is quick and powerful —." He spake and the worlds came into existence, including Milky Ways and Galaxies millions of "light years" distance. We like to hear that great song "How Great Thou Art" but how is it that we don't like to read His Book and hear all He has to say, and learn of Him whom to know is Eternal Life? In the Old Testament there are approximately seventeen hundred and fifty passages (1750) prefaced by "Thus saith The Lord," "God spake," or kindred words that indicate God Himself is speaking. But our generation has but little, if any, time for all that talk: "the Ancient of Days is out of date." Is it not so, Mr. Modernist, D.D.? Nevertheless, He holds the whole world in His Hand! He holds the tiny baby in His Hand! In commenting on Jesus' statement regarding the little children: "Of such is the Kingdom of Heaven," some one has observed that after the little children appear on the scene as a "little bundle from heaven," dwell and are in the hands of parents, school teachers, preachers, etc. Whose hearts are "deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked," and never find it out, that of many of these children after a few years it might truly be said "Of such is the kingdom of hell and devil!" Where is the sincere grown person that don't feel ashamed and responsible that there are grounds for such an observation?

Yes, God is quite an Author: He used about forty different secretaries over a period of about 1500 years to produce His Book, The Bible, and in the closing words warned men not to meddle with it by taking from, or adding to! Martin Luther was quite an intellectual giant, and a very learned man. Hear what he said regarding some of the great of the earth who have raged against The God of The Bible: "Infinite potencies have raged against This Book, and have sought to destroy and uproot it — king Alexander the Great, the princes of Egypt and Babylon, the monarchs of Persia, of Greece, and of Rome, the emperors Julius and Augustus — but they nothing prevailed; they are all gone and vanished, while the Book remains, and will remain for ever and ever, perfect and entire as it was declared at first. "Take heed Modernists, New Translators, scorners and scoffers, you too will all soon be gone and vanish, but The Book will remain because God is its Author. Jesus Christ said of it: "The Scriptures cannot be broken." Take courage and rejoice fundamentalist. John Wesley was called a "Bible Bigot" in mockery. But where are the mockers?

Don't rage against God and His Moral Law and Ten Commandments like the rebellious in The Second Psalm and get in line for the wrath and curse. Rather go back to the First Psalm, depart from evil counsel, evil ways, the seat of the scornful, and meditate day and night in The Law of The Lord with the prayer that you will come to delight in it. If this never happens would you enjoy heaven even were you to get there? Judging from the way many church members stay away from The House of God it is surely going to be a heavy strain on them to have to "dwell in The House of The Lord forever" — if they got the chance.

Interest rate worries depress stock market

New York (AP) — The stock market, depressed once again by interest rate worries, closed out its third straight losing week Friday with a decline that left the Dow Jones industrial average at a new two-year low.

The Dow average of 30 blue chips fell 6.50 to 808.30, its lowest close since it finished at 794.55 on Oct. 2, 1975.

The average's 13.34-point drop for the week brought its loss since the start of October to 38.81 points.

Declining issues outnumbered gainers by a 4-3 margin in the daily tally on the New York Stock Exchange, and the NYSE's composite index was down 17.45 points.

With Friday's drop the market reached a milestone of sorts. The Dow's loss from its closing peak of 1,014.79 on Sept. 21 of last year marked the 200-point mark.

New York's Citibank raised

Dow Ind. —6.50

its prime lending rate Friday morning from 7 1/2 to 7 3/4 percent, for the sixth increase this year in the basic charge on blue chip loans. A handful of other banks followed suit as the day passed.

That marked the highest level for the prime in nearly two years.

Late Thursday the White House issued a statement implicitly criticizing the Federal Reserve for recent credit-tightening actions that have exerted upward pressure on interest rates.

Given its apparent preoccupation with the interest-rate question, the market showed no response to the news that the consumer price index rose a relatively modest 0.3 percent last month, matching its August pace.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials dropped .37 to 101.63, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was off .35 at 92.32.

Among the biggest contributors to the Dow's loss Friday was Eastman Kodak, down 1 1/2 at 52 1/2 as of the 4 p.m. close of the NYSE.

On Thursday the company cited several negative factors in its fourth quarter outlook.

Dow Chemical, which reported lower third quarter earnings, fell 1 1/4 to 26 1/4 in active trading.

U.S. Industries, also active, picked up 1/4 to 7. The company raised its quarterly dividend from 10 to 13 cents a share.

Actively traded American Stock Exchange issues included Hycel, up 1/2 at 5 1/2, and Syntex, down 1/4 at 16 1/4.

The Amex market value index rose .27 to 114.09. In the over-the-counter market, the NASDAQ composite index slipped .06 to 88.54.

Barrows, gilts fairly active

Omaha (AP) — Barrows and gilts were fairly active with 2,500 hogs offered Friday on the Omaha Livestock Exchange.

Barrows and gilts were 25 to 30 cents lower, except for those weighing 280-300 pounds, which were steady to 50 cents lower. U.S. 1-3s weighing 200-250 pounds sold for $41.00-41.50. Sows under 500 pounds sold for 25 to 50 cents lower.

There were 6,200 cattle and calves offered Friday. Most of the supply was feeder cattle for auction. There was not enough trade on any slaughter class to establish a market.

No sheep were offered Friday.

If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

NU-CU song: what a difference a week makes

By Virgil Parker
Sports Editor

A sign on the blackboard in the Nebraska football dressing this week has read, "Buffalo season opens Saturday." Another said, "Free Ruben sandwiches Saturday at 1:30."

The first sign, of course, is in reference to the invasion of the Colorado Buffaloes for today's Big Eight Conference clash in Memorial Stadium.

The second points particularly to Buff defensive tackle Ruben Vaughan, who in a published interview this summer said, "I hate Nebraska. I want their meat worse than anyone's in the country."

So, the stage is set. A week ago the game shaped up as a battle for a spot among the top teams in the nation in the weekly rating polls. Things have changed. Colorado was tied by Kansas and Nebraska lost to Iowa State last Saturday. Now it becomes a game of survival. The loser will have two chances — slim and none — to capture the conference championship.

ference championship.

Cornhusker coach Tom Osborne is hoping his club will bounce back from the Iowa State defeat the same way it did after dropping the season-opener to Washington State. The Huskers surged to a victory over Alabama on national TV the next Saturday.

"I think we're ready," Osborne declared after what he said was a "better than normal week of practices. We've practiced well enough to win. Now we have to go out and play well enough to win."

The task won't be easy. The visiting Buffs of coach Bill Mallory lead the Big Eight in total offense, scoring offense and scoring defense. Colorado quarterback Jeff Knappe is the league's leading passer as well as the conference's total offense pacesetter.

The Buffs also feature the running of fullback James Mayberry, who two weeks ago gained over 100 yards more than Heisman Trophy candidate Terry Miller in a head-to-head showdown with Oklahoma State.

Colorado is the only unbeaten team in the Big Eight, coming to the Capital City with a 5-0-1 record. The Huskers stand 4-2 on the current campaign.

If history repeats itself, Nebraska should win. The Cornhuskers have captured the last nine meetings between the two schools and have won 14 of the last 15 matchups.

But Nebraska had also won 15 consecutive games against Iowa State before dropping the last two in a row.

The Cornhuskers will counter the running of Mayberry with what Mallory admits is "the best 1-2 punch at tailback in the league" with sophomore sensation Isaiah Hipp and Richard Berns.

Hipp, who became the first Husker in history to put together back-to-back 200-yard games, (a record-setting 254 against Indiana and 207 against Kansas State), was confined to the Student Health Center in midweek with the flu.

But, Osborne says, he's ready to go.

If Hipp is not at full strength, it could signal the return of Berns to center stage. Berns received his first national attention against Colorado last year when he ran for 127 yards to lead the Huskers to a 24-12 victory.

In the final regular season game of 1976, Berns set a school rushing record of 211 yards against Hawaii — a record Hipp broke this fall after Berns was injured.

While most of the attention focuses on the explosive offenses of the two teams, defensive play will likely decide the outcome. Going into the game, the two clubs are virtually tied in that department. Colorado has given up an average of 297.3 yards per game, while Nebraska has allowed 298.7.

The kickoff is set for 1:30, and a Homecoming crowd of over 76,000 will be on hand. It will mark the 93rd consecutive capacity crowd at Memorial Stadium.

Islanders deal LNE stunning 15-13 setback

By Chuck Sinclair
Prep Sports Writer

Grand Island — Coach Ken Fischer was counting his blessings Friday night, each in the form of a Lincoln Northeast turnover as No. 6-rated Grand Island solidified its position in the state playoff picture with a 15-13 triumph over the No. 2 Rockets.

The Islanders capitalized on three of five Rocket miscues, converting two into touchdowns and using the last to deny Northeast quarterback Randee Johnson a chance to move his offense with just over three minutes remaining in the game.

It was of little consolation that Northeast outgained Grand Island, 224-91 on the ground, 80-31 in the air, and had 18 first downs to the Islanders' 8.

The big statistic was on the turnover side of the ledger, coupled with an 88-yard return of an interception by GI's Jim Jeffries that turned an apparent chance at a Northeast touchdown into eight points for the Islanders.

That was a key turning point in the game according to both Fischer and Northeast coach Bob Els as Jeffries' interception came just before the half when Northeast had already driven 40 yards to the GI 13-yard line and was threatening. "I think the interception really hurt their passing game," offered a relieved Fischer. "They went away from it after that, and I thought he (Johnson) could hurt us. The kid's a good passer."

Another play that didn't exactly hurt Grand Island's effort came on Northeast's second possession of the game.

The Rocket defense had held on a goal line stand getting the ball back on its own 4-yard line after checking the Islanders to three yards on four tries.

But the Rockets' Lonnie Westling was stuck at the line of scrimmage and coughed up the football, immediately covered by Grand Island's Jack Smith in the first of two crucial recoveries for the 6-1, 200-pound senior.

Jeffries scored from a yard out on third down to put the Islanders on top, 6-0, and Steve Murray added the point after.

The Rockets struck back sustaining a 74-yard drive capped by Johnson's one-yard sneak with 10:59 left in the half.

Then with Grand Island's offense again checked, Johnson began moving the Rockets late in the half, only to be shocked by Jeffries interception return.

A key play followed as Holder Tim Ward bobbled the snap from center. He grabbed the ball rolled to his left and rifled a perfect pass into the waiting arms of Greg Bafort.

That two pointer forced Northeast to try for two after Westling scored from four yards out in the fourth quarter following a 52-yard flea-flicker pass from halfback Matt Svoboda to Tracy Stauffer. Westling was knocked out of bounds short of the goal on the point after attempt.

The biggest turnover in terms of giving Northeast a final chance followed Grand Island's stalled drive on its 47-yard line. Ward's 26-yard punt with Northeast rushing 10 men was fumbled by Jim Slosson and once again recovered by Smith.

Playing for injured quarterback Kim Willman, Ward came on to pick up a first down, running the clock down to 16 seconds before Northeast could try an offensive play. Time ran out after two passing attempts.

"The first half interception hurt us the most," Els said. "They got the touchdown and we didn't."

"I wasn't very confident going into the game or any time during the game," Fischer admitted. "We had some key people sick. Brett Baxter was out sick and Kim Willman got sick right before the game. Northeast has such a great football team we weren't sure what would happen."

"You've really got to play well to beat a Lincoln team," Fischer added. "Any Lincoln team. They're all so well coached. What's that for Northeast, two losses? They're not out of anything."

Northeast at 6-2 must defeat Fremont Thursday night at Seacrest Field for any hopes at the playoffs while Grand Island (6-2) meets Hastings next Friday night.

Fisher comes through in the clutch, 14-7

By Ken Hambleton
Staff Sports Writer

Lincoln Southeast coach Frank Solich knew that Vernon Fisher could come through with the big plays the Knights needed, but he wanted to let the senior quarterback think on the sidelines awhile.

The decision paid off for Southeast as the fourth-rated Knights counted on two Fisher touchdowns in the final seven minutes of the game to score a 14-7 win over Lincoln East Friday night at Seacrest Field.

Fisher, who had started at quarterback for LSE four games ago, was replaced in the second quarter after he forced an option pitch and caused a turnover.

But the senior transfer from Indianola, Iowa, sparked the Knights on a nine-play 75-yard drive late in the final quarter and dove across for the score to tie the game at 7-7 with 6:59 left.

Solich decided to go for the extra point kick by Wade Morris to tie the game.

Southeast then held the Spartans to five yards in three carries following the kickoff and, after a 21-yard punt into a stiff wind, took over possession on the East 35 with 4:40 remaining.

Fisher, a 6-4, 175-pound senior, carried five consecutive times to the 22 and after two runs for 12 yards by Dan Meginnis and Jeff Rena, Fisher carried the ball the final 10 yards in three plays, scoring the winning touchdown.

from the 5-yard line on a option play.

East reserve quarterback Tom Vergith broke the scoreless game open in the third quarter when he led a 57-yard march on the Spartans' first possession of the second half.

Vergith, who replaced starting quarterback Chip Carmichael at the half, rushed four times on options for 42 yards including the final 12 yards to put East ahead 7-0 with 6:24 remaining in the third quarter.

LSE bounced back with a long drive from its 28 to the East 30-yard line, but the Spartans held on a fourth and three situation.

Vergith picked up the East offense again hitting Dana Childs on a 17 yard pass and Scott Schoettger on a 15 yard pass to spark a 56-yard drive to the LSE 27-yard line.

But on a fourth and two situation the Spartans were called for an offsides penalty and had to punt from the 32. The combination of the Knights' rush and a stiff wind cut the punt to eight yards, setting up LSE's 75-yard drive to tie the game.

"We didn't even think of going for anything but the one point after we scored," said LSE's Solich. "We figured after that great drive we could stop East and force them to punt into the wind and still have five minutes to score."

"We had our rushing game going in the second half with Vernon running the option and we didn't make the mistakes that kept us from scoring in the first half or all last week against Northeast," Solich said referring to LSE's only loss of the season last week.

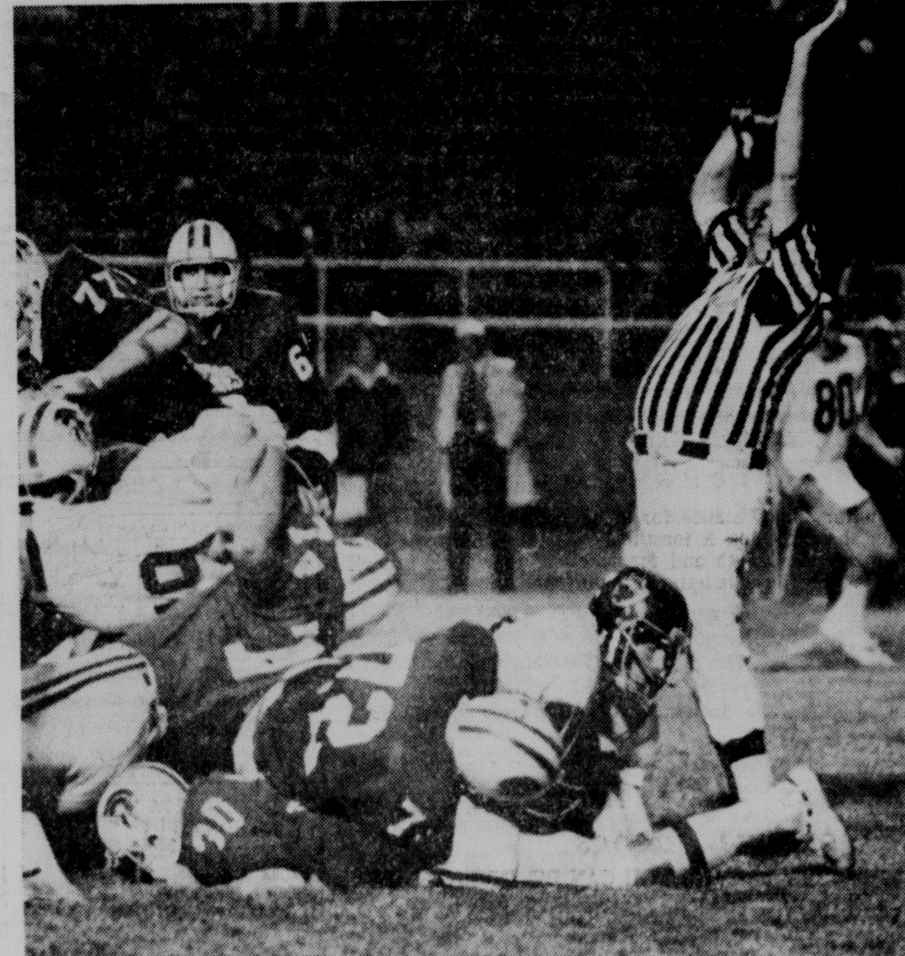

One major factor in LSE's revived rushing game in the second half was the installation of defensive standouts Robin Derr and Layne Nelsen into the offensive line.

"Robin had never played offensive tackle for us and Layne had played a little on pass situations," said LSE offensive line coach Randy Brothorst.

"We think those two made a considerable difference in the success of our running game in the second half and we were able to run over the tackles pretty well," said Brothorst. "Our center Greg Perry did a pretty good job of handling Rhett Stephenson considering how good Stephenson is, and what he means to East's defense."

East coach Lee Zentic, whose club is now 5-3, said the offensive line change showed up the Knights' weakness.

"We felt if Southeast had any weakness it was their tackles," said Zentic. "And putting Derr and Nelsen in there really made a difference in the game."

"I'm glad that we didn't let down after falling behind 7-0 like we did last week and we really needed this win to help our playoff chances," said Solich.

Lincoln Southeast, now 6-1, travels to Norfolk next week while East faces Lincoln High at Seacrest Field next Friday night.

Pius X does it to St. Albert one more time, 48-6

By Tom Vint
Staff Sports Writer

Year after year, Council Bluffs St. Albert football coach Nick McGrain will tell you the same thing. Lincoln Pius X is the best football team his squad faces.

Friday night's 48-6 thrashing by Pius of the Falcons didn't change a thing in McGrain's mind.

"Last year we played the equivalent of Class B's state champion in Iowa in the semifinals of the state playoffs," McGrain said. "They weren't even close to Pius. Pius is always the best team we play."

Last year Pius didn't even make it into the Nebraska state playoffs. This year coach Vince Aldrich and his Thunderbolts don't want that to happen again. A loss to Lexington sidelined Pius a year ago, but the new wild card system may be breathing new life into the Bolts this year.

After last week's loss to Lexington, Friday night was a win or bust situation. Fullback Marty Coniglio didn't leave any doubt as to how the 6-1 Bolts were approaching the game before it was even a minute old.

Coniglio, who had been used somewhat sparingly the past three or four games while I-back Mike Morin ran wild, broke through the St. Albert line and raced 73 yards for a touchdown on the first play from scrimmage.

Before the evening was over Coniglio had rushed for 197 yards and scored another touchdown on a 28-yard run. A third TD, which would have been good for 64 yards, was called back when an official said the Bolt fullback stepped on the chalk line at the St. Albert 36.

"I was planning on using Coniglio a little bit more but I didn't figure he'd go like that," smiled a relieved Aldrich. His club came to play and the first quarter showed 21-0 results.

"I think the first quarter, those kids really played like they should," said the veteran coach. "I felt we had quite a letdown after last week and the kids had to redeem themselves. We had to come back for a chance in the playoffs."

The Bolts ran rampant against the outmatched Falcons. Morin scored on a three-yard run and John Peters intercepted a St. Albert pass, then raced 72 yards for the third first quarter touchdown.

Penalties stymied the Bolts in the second quarter but the third period left no doubt as to the game's outcome. Pat Wiese kept around left end on a quarterback option for a 20-yard TD before Coniglio outspurred the visitors seven minutes later for a 28-yard six-pointer.

The Pius regulars went to the bench from that point and the subs continued to rack up points. Tim Brunshah scooted 45 yards and reserve quarterback Dan Bissel went right on an option play for a 21-yarder in the final quarter. Bissel also booted six extra points before having the final try blocked.

St. Albert, which had trouble running against Pius' injury-plagued defense, managed just 23 yards on the ground. The Falcons finally scored on a 43-yard pass play from Pat Rindens to Mike German with 2:03 to play.

"We had a lot of breakdowns defensively," said McGrain.

"Physically up front they were better. They outmanned us and that was that. This is by far the best football team we've played this year and probably will be."

Pius tries to ensure a playoff spot next week as it travels to Class A Beatrice.

Prep bends, but it's Papillion which breaks, 7-0

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

Papillion — Nebraska's leading Class A defensive team has a cliché for a motto, but it worked again here Friday night as fifth-ranked Creighton Prep made top-ranked Papillion its sixth shutout victim of the season, 7-0.

"We bent a lot, but we didn't break. I know that's a cliché, but we thrive on it," said Brother Mike Wilmot, S.J., Prep's defensive coordinator.

"The whole defense thinks bend, don't break from the opening kickoff to the final gun," linebacker Tata Machado said. "That's why we're so stingy. No matter where the other team has the ball, we're never going to give up."

Prep put its motto to the test early when Papillion's Mick Richards recovered a Tim Rogers' fumble in the first minute on Prep's 36-yard line.

Two Duke Vair runs advanced the football to the Prep 6-yard-line, but the Junior Jays thwarted the threat when Doug Spellman intercepted a pass in the end zone.

"Spellman looked like an all-stater out there tonight," Prep head coach Tom Jaworski said after his team checked the Papio offense to 152 total yards.

"Spellman had their passing game figured out," Jaworski said. "He's the reason we had four interceptions. He was probably happy to play on a soft field tonight because he's been fighting a sprained ankle all season."

A downpour of rain set back the opening kickoff 35 minutes, causing many of the 6,000 fans to scurry for their cars and shelter.

Neither team flashed much offensive punch on the soggy field, but the Junior Jays marched 73 yards on 11 plays in the closing minutes of the first half for the game's only touchdown.

Quarterback Tim O'Brien covered the final two yards with 1:31 remaining in the second quarter and Rob Rohling kicked the conversion despite a fumbled snap from center.

A 15-run by Rogers, a 10-yard run by Willis Sherman and a juggling 7-yard pass reception by Spellman highlighted the drive. Prep outdowned Papio, 14-8 and finished with 245 yards total offense, including 189 on the ground.

Rogers, Class A's fifth-leading rusher entering the game, finished with 106 yards on 29 carries. Papillion's Vair, the state's second-leading rusher entering the game, netted only 45 yards on 11 carries after having 56 yards on five carries in the first half.

Field position plagued Papillion throughout the second half. The Monarchs moved into Creighton Prep territory for the first time in the half on the final play of the third quarter.

That threat was quickly spoiled, however, when Spellman intercepted his second pass on the Prep 15.

The Monarchs hurt their chances to put Prep in a hole with 7:21 left in the fourth quarter, electing to fake a punt on a fourth-and-12 situation from the Prep 43-yard-line.

"I was screaming my fanny off that they would try the fake punt," Jaworski said. "It's one of those plays. If they had made it, it would have been a great play. But I think we were geared for it."

The showdown was marred by a rash of penalties. Prep was penalized 100 yards and Papillion was assessed

Becky's Tesone has patience

By Dave Sittler
Staff Sports Writer

While the hot August sun blazed down on Folsom Field, Colorado's Tom Tesone calmly and coolly sat alone in the bleachers, patiently waiting.

"If it mattered that members of the Skywriters Tour ignored him while crowding around to interview his teammate, massive and talented defensive tackle Ruben Vaughn, Tesone didn't show it. He could wait. Tesone could write a book on patience."

When his turn with the writers finally arrived, the soft-spoken Tesone quietly recounted the mental stress he had been through the past year and a half because of a serious knee injury.

He modestly credited his faith in the Lord and the unflinching support of his wife, Becky, as the driving forces behind his attempted comeback. Without them, he said he probably wouldn't have been around for the interviews. He'd have hung it up months ago.

But he was there. And Colorado's "old man," the 23-year-old Tesone recalled playing Apache (monster) back against Nebraska's sophomore (1975) season. Moving up to make a tackle on a Husker sweep, he was accidentally ambushed by one of his teammates. Also trying to make the tackle, Buff linebacker Bart Roth tomahawked Tesone ripping his knee apart.

"That was a crazy game," Tesone said while recalling the 1975 Nebraska-Colorado clash in Lincoln which the Huskers won 63-21, thanks to a bundle of Colorado turnovers. "I knew right away that my knee was gone."

It was gone the way of two operations. He watched with quiet envy from the sidelines last year as Colorado captured a share of the Big Eight title and a trip to the Orange Bowl.

"My wife picked me up mentally time after time when I wanted to quit," Tesone said of Becky, the high school sweetheart he made his bride this summer. "We both relied on the Lord a great deal to get through it."

Tesone came within two signatures—his and Randy Garcia's—of becoming a Cornhusker instead of a Buffalo. A prep all-American at Cherry Creek High School where he played quarterback for his ultra-successful father, Fred Tesone, Tom was leaning toward signing a letter-of-intent with Nebraska.

When he heard a passing wizard out of Los Angeles named Randy Garcia had rejected an offer from Stanford and signed with Nebraska, Tesone figured the Huskers had their quarterback back so he inked with the Buffs.

"I remember visiting Nebraska in December of my senior year," Tom said. "Dave Humm, Tom Ruud and Jim Seaton (former Huskers) showed me around and I had a great time."

"Nebraska was getting ready for the Orange Bowl and there was a lot of excitement. I was very impressed with the total program at Nebraska."

Tesone and Garcia, who almost became teammates and competitors for the same position, will square off one final time Saturday. The comeback complete, Tesone is now the Buffs starting safety. He'll be wearing No. 16 and doing his best to swipe a pass or two from Garcia.

One Buff who won't make the trip to Lincoln is tailback Mike Kozlowski. Expected to solve Colorado's running back problems, Koz has been hit by a congenital lung problem.

A transfer from Mira Costa (Calif.) Junior College, Koz is the son of Michael and Marilyn Kawehewehokala Kozlowski. His Polish father met his Hawaiian-Samoan mother while stationed with the Army in Hawaii. Mike's mother was a hula dancer.

"She was a double-knife dancer, one of the best in the islands," Mike said of Mom. Coach Billy Mallory is hoping Koz will do some more dancing in the Colorado backfield for this season is over.

Regional Center victim identified
A Lincoln Regional Center Friday has been identified as Eugene M. Johnson; 39.

Johnson, a former Lincoln resident, had been a patient at the regional center since 1971, according to a Lancaster County Sheriff's report. He hanged himself with a coat hanger.

Alma's Ott gets judgeship
Gov. J. James Exon announced the appointment Friday of Jack Ott of Alma to the county judgeship in the 10th judicial district.

Ott will fill the vacancy created when Judge Bernard Sprague was named a district judge in August.

Islanders, sporting a 9-1 record, drew a first round bye in the tournament.

Tournament play opens at 11 a.m. with fourth-seeded Northeast (6-7) meeting Lincoln High (3-10).

Lincoln youths face charges in burglaries
Five youths were arrested Friday and charged in connection with burglaries at seven Lincoln schools in recent weeks.

Police said the arrests also cleared several recent Lincoln residential burglaries.

Four were charged in Lancaster County Court on burglary counts and the fifth was referred to juvenile authorities.

Kevin Smisek, 18, of 421 N.W. 18th, was charged with one count of burglary; his brother Joseph, 16, of 340 N. 28th, was charged with three burglary counts. Chris Worrell, 16, also of 421 N.W. 18th, was charged with three burglary counts. Larry Hall, 17, of the same address, was charged with one burglary count.

All were ordered to return to court on Nov. 8.

Charges against the three youths who are under 18 may be transferred to Juvenile Court, a county court spokesman said.

Mason found guilty in sex assault case
Gaylord Mason, 21, of 636 S. 17th, was found guilty Friday of sexually assaulting a 23-year-old former Lincoln woman.

A six-man, six-woman jury deliberated about four hours before returning the verdict against Mason. Lancaster County District Judge William Hastings ordered a presentence investigation.

The victim had testified Mason came into the bedroom of her apartment early in the morning of July 28 and threatened to cut her if she made a sound. She managed to coax him into the kitchen in hopes of dissuading him from raping her, she said, but that play eventually proved futile.

The woman said Mason later forced her back into the bedroom and sexually assaulted her, then left. Police later picked him up shortly afterwards at 16th and H Sts.

While searching the woman's apartment, police discovered Mason's military identification tags. He had been discharged from the army about a week before the incident.

In his closing argument, Mason's attorney Richard Goos pointed out that the victim said she never saw a knife in Mason's hand, and had an opportunity to escape but didn't take it.

The witness had testified she could have escaped from the apartment at one point before Mason assaulted her, but did not because she was afraid for the safety of her roommate who was asleep in another bedroom.

Deputy Lancaster County Atty. Gary Lacey admonished the jury to bring back the guilty verdict, saying the victim was "raped in the worst possible way," then had the ordeal of relating the incident in clinical detail in court.

Genoan innocent of sexual assault

Harlow Brown, 39, of Genoa, was found innocent Friday of sexually assaulting a former undercover drug informant of the Nebraska State Patrol.

Brown, who testified that he did have sexual intercourse with the woman but did not rape her, was acquitted by a nine-man, three-woman jury after about three hours of deliberation.

After the verdict was given, Brown shook hands with Deputy Lancaster County Atty. Bob Gibson and Jan Dutton, telling them he thought they had been fair.

Early in the trial, a woman who had once been a cooperating individual for the patrol, said she met Brown at a Lincoln bar. He told her he was a narcotics trafficker for the Chicago Mafia and that his life was in danger, she testified.

The two then drove to Branched Oak Lake, where Brown said they walked hand-in-hand to the lake shore and the woman removed her clothes while standing by herself on his shoulder.

The woman had testified Brown claimed to have a gun and threatened to kill her. After the incident, the woman called her patrol supervisor who advised her to go home, get some sleep, and come to patrol headquarters the next morning.

The woman said that at the time of the incident she wanted to make a drug case against Brown rather than press charges for rape. But a search for him by the patrol was fruitless, and possible evidence gathered at the scene was destroyed several weeks later by the patrol.

Rape center funding backed by committee
The Rape Crisis Center was never given a guarantee of LEAA funding, even though it kept moving up the list of priorities, said Kurt Snoberger, the commission's executive director.

The committee also recommended allowing the Youth Service System intake and referral service to use $5,218 in county funds left over from last year's budget to set up a crisis counseling program for runaway youths.

A part-time Youth Service system worker would be on call to counsel teenagers when they are picked up by police for running away from home. The worker would try to get them to return home rather than going to the Lancaster Freeway Station, the Juvenile Attention Center, or other temporary placement.

The committee toyed with the idea of using the excess cash from the Youth Service System to fund the Rape Crisis Center. County administrative assistant Wayne Hart noted that it is contrary to city and county policy to let any department carry excess funds over into the following year.

Five youths were arrested Friday and charged in connection with burglaries at seven Lincoln schools in recent weeks.

Police said the arrests also cleared several recent Lincoln residential burglaries.

Four were charged in Lancaster County Court on burglary counts and the fifth was referred to juvenile authorities.

Kevin Smisek, 18, of 421 N.W. 18th, was charged with one count of burglary; his brother Joseph, 16, of 340 N. 28th, was charged with three burglary counts. Chris Worrell, 16, also of 421 N.W. 18th, was charged with three burglary counts. Larry Hall, 17, of the same address, was charged with one burglary count.

All were ordered to return to court on Nov. 8.

Charges against the three youths who are under 18 may be transferred to Juvenile Court, a county court spokesman said.

Mason found guilty in sex assault case
Gaylord Mason, 21, of 636 S. 17th, was found guilty Friday of sexually assaulting a 23-year-old former Lincoln woman.

A six-man, six-woman jury deliberated about four hours before returning the verdict against Mason. Lancaster County District Judge William Hastings ordered a presentence investigation.

The victim had testified Mason came into the bedroom of her apartment early in the morning of July 28 and threatened to cut her if she made a sound. She managed to coax him into the kitchen in hopes of dissuading him from raping her, she said, but that play eventually proved futile.

The woman said Mason later forced her back into the bedroom and sexually assaulted her, then left. Police later picked him up shortly afterwards at 16th and H Sts.

While searching the woman's apartment, police discovered Mason's military identification tags. He had been discharged from the army about a week before the incident.

In his closing argument, Mason's attorney Richard Goos pointed out that the victim said she never saw a knife in Mason's hand, and had an opportunity to escape but didn't take it.

The witness had testified she could have escaped from the apartment at one point before Mason assaulted her, but did not because she was afraid for the safety of her roommate who was asleep in another bedroom.

Deputy Lancaster County Atty. Gary Lacey admonished the jury to bring back the guilty verdict, saying the victim was "raped in the worst possible way," then had the ordeal of relating the incident in clinical detail in court.

Rape center funding backed by committee
The Rape Crisis Center was never given a guarantee of LEAA funding, even though it kept moving up the list of priorities, said Kurt Snoberger, the commission's executive director.

The committee also recommended allowing the Youth Service System intake and referral service to use $5,218 in county funds left over from last year's budget to set up a crisis counseling program for runaway youths.

A part-time Youth Service system worker would be on call to counsel teenagers when they are picked up by police for running away from home. The worker would try to get them to return home rather than going to the Lancaster Freeway Station, the Juvenile Attention Center, or other temporary placement.

The committee toyed with the idea of using the excess cash from the Youth Service System to fund the Rape Crisis Center. County administrative assistant Wayne Hart noted that it is contrary to city and county policy to let any department carry excess funds over into the following year.

Wyoming power plant halt asked

Cheyenne (UPI) — Two agricultural groups Friday asked the Wyoming Supreme Court to void the authorization for construction of the $1.5 billion Laramie River Station power plant near Wheatland, Wyo., pending further study.

The Laramie River Conservation Council, based in Wheatland, and the Powder River Basin Resource Council, headquartered in Sheridan, asked the high court to reverse a lower court decision which affirmed the permit.

The Industrial Siting Council issued the permit, on a conditional basis, April 29, 1976, after hearing evidence at a public hearing. The council argued through its counsel, Assiatin Atty. Gen. Steven F. Freudenthal, that the action was justified.

The high court took the matter under advisement, the customary procedure in appeals cases.

The 1,500 megawatt plant is currently being constructed outside of Wheatland by the Missouri Basin Power Project, a consortium of electric companies. It is designed to provide power to Colorado, Wyoming, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, and Montana. The project manager is Basin Electric, based in Bismarck, N.D.

David F. Parmerlee, attorney for the two agricultural groups, said the siting council was required by law to conduct two hearings before issuing the go-ahead to begin building the plant. The permit therefore should be voided pending the outcome of the second hearing, he said.

Parmerlee said the law provides that a second hearing is necessary unless the applicant proves the facility will not harm the environment, the economy or social fabric of the area, as well as present and future residents — something Basin failed to do.

But Freudenthal argued the law provides that conditional permits may be issued after just one hearing.

The lawyer for Basin, D.N. Sherard, said the company has complied with the council's conditions for issuing the permit. He said the plant would create some adverse effects, but the long range benefits outweighed them.

Doctor and student rule Ak-Sar-Ben

Omaha (AP) — Dr. Harold Gifford Jr. and Shirley Ann Landen are the 83rd king and queen of Ak-Sar-Ben.

They were named at the annual coronation Friday night. Gifford is a 71-year-old ophthalmologist who last fall donated an 8,000-acre tract to the Fontenelle Forest Nature Center. Most of the center had been purchased by his late father in 1923 and was donated to the forest for the continued use by the Metropolitan Educational Program Agency.

Miss Landen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence L. Landen Jr. Her father is chairman of the board and president of Security National Bank and McCann Industries. His father, Clarence Landen Sr., reigned as the 59th king of Ak-Sar-Ben in 1953.

Miss Landen, 21, is a psychology major at Tulane University in New Orleans and is interested in becoming a medical technologist.

Dr. Gifford is regarded as an innovator in the treatment of the eyes and was a pioneer in the use of local anesthesia in cataract surgery.

Disputed nominee to meet the press

Omaha (UPI) — Clive Short of Omaha, a nominee for U.S. marshal in Nebraska, said he is planning to call a news conference to discuss and rebut the contents of an FBI report that apparently contains allegations against him.

Short said he obtained the 132-page FBI report this week and was reviewing it with his attorneys. He also said he would not make the report public because of its length.

The FBI file reportedly discusses such things as Short's previous drinking problem, his questionable practices with surplus property while he was superintendent of the Capitol and Grounds, and possible objections from deputy marshals.

Short's nomination, made by Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., has been strongly backed by Gov. J. James Exon and Rep. John Cavanaugh, D-Neb.

But Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., has opposed the nomination and said he would hold up the naming of a U.S. attorney for Nebraska until Short's name is withdrawn from consideration.

Short served as U.S. marshal during the Lyndon Johnson administration.

Innocent plea entered in body disposal case

Gering (AP) — Richard Robinson, 31, of Torrington, Wyo., pleaded innocent Friday in Scotts Bluff County District Court jury found Robinson innocent of murder in the Parker death last April.

During the trial Robinson said the shotgun he was holding discharged and the shot struck Parker after Parker grabbed the end of the gun barrel.

The men had been quarreling earlier about money Parker thought Robinson owed him.

Robinson remains free on a $5,000 bond.

U.N. dinner speaker replaced

John Miles, principal officer in the office of the under secretaries general for special political affairs, will replace William C. Powell as speaker for the United Nations Day Dinner.

Miles, who has been with the U.N. since 1959, has served as political advisor in Pakistan-Kashmir, Cyprus and Palestine.

The dinner is Sunday evening at 6:30 at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education. Tickets are required for the dinner, but the public may attend Miles' speech afterward.

Miles will also speak to the Omaha United Nations Day dinner on Monday evening in Omaha.

Cheney school decision due

The Lincoln Board of Education is expected to make a decision on a Cheney School District petition during the 7 p.m. Tuesday meeting at Clinton School cafeteria.

Some Cheney taxpayers have asked that the Cheney district, which serves elementary students, be divided among four neighboring school districts. Lincoln schools would get 18 additional students next year under the plan.

Other items on the agenda include a report on staffing ratios and class sizes for this year and possible refurbishing of Clinton and Elliott schools.

Chicago (AP) — U.S. Labor Secretary Ray Marshall says enactment of President Carter's energy program

Job boost possible would give the economy a boost by creating jobs in domestic energy production.

Sound problems cloud chamber orchestra's clarity

By Richard Grace
The Nebraska Chamber Orchestra opened its initial concert Friday evening at First Plymouth Congregational Church. Featuring three guest artists; Stephanie Chase, violin, Larry Graham, piano, and guest conductor, Robert Olson, the orchestra and soloists gave an entirely credible performance despite the acoustical problems of this beautiful church sanctuary.

One cannot deny that chamber music is one of the most demanding forms of all musical performance. It requires more intellectual listening without the more visual aspects of an opera or the aurally bombastic sounds of a larger ensemble. Therefore, it is necessary for everything else to be as near perfect as possible. The local chamber group and the two young soloists seemed to meet these demands but the sanctuary did not. It simply was not constructed with this type of musical performance in mind. The echo and sound delay from the front of the church kept the clarity and precision from being a noticeable part of the concert.

Howard's Knob in Carolina site for windmill for power

Washington (AP) — The Department of Energy announced Friday the selection of a mountaintop near Boone, N.C., for construction of the world's largest windmill.

The windmill will have a pair of adjustable blades spanning 200 feet, or more than four times longer than the wingspan of a Boeing 747 jumbo jet airliner.

The huge, whirling blades, which are scheduled to start spinning late in 1978, should also be visible to travelers on the scenic Blue Ridge Parkway.

The windmill, a modern version of an ancient machine, will turn an electric generator producing 2,000 kilowatts of power to serve the Blue Ridge Electrical Membership Corp., a utility cooperative.

The department said the power would be enough to meet the electricity needs of more than 500 homes.

The giant windmill, which will be built atop a peak called Howard's Knob, will cost about $3.5 million, including its generator and instruments to measure its performance, the department said.

The windmill is part of a $20 million department program to study the feasibility of harnessing wind power to generate electricity.

If successful, the technique would have the major advantages of requiring no fuel and producing no pollution. But first, the modern windmill must prove it can work reliably and economically.

To generate a reasonably constant electric current, the windmill must adapt to changes in wind velocity. Its blades must adjust their turning force and keep their speed roughly constant.

When the wind is either too weak to generate usable electricity or too strong for the windmill to operate safely, the windmill will automatically shut itself down, officials said.

Windmills have been used for centuries to drive water pumps — such as those that drained the sea from parts of the Netherlands — or to grind grain, or to power small electric generators on farms.

But they have not previously been developed in large versions for electric power.

The department noted that a 175-foot-diameter windmill was built in the 1940s, but it lost a blade and was abandoned as the nation's efforts focused on the demands of World War II.

Howard's Knob in Carolina site for windmill for power

Washington (AP) — The Department of Energy announced Friday the selection of a mountaintop near Boone, N.C., for construction of the world's largest windmill.

The windmill will have a pair of adjustable blades spanning 200 feet, or more than four times longer than the wingspan of a Boeing 747 jumbo jet airliner.

The huge, whirling blades, which are scheduled to start spinning late in 1978, should also be visible to travelers on the scenic Blue Ridge Parkway.

The windmill, a modern version of an ancient machine, will turn an electric generator producing 2,000 kilowatts of power to serve the Blue Ridge Electrical Membership Corp., a utility cooperative.

The department said the power would be enough to meet the electricity needs of more than 500 homes.

The giant windmill, which will be built atop a peak called Howard's Knob, will cost about $3.5 million, including its generator and instruments to measure its performance, the department said.

The windmill is part of a $20 million department program to study the feasibility of

A hearing was set for Nov. 9 on whether Kiritsis remains insane and requires treatment.

Kiritsis, 45, who admitted staging the kidnapping, went to Hall's office in downtown In-
